ENDED IN TROUBLE

A socialist meeting at the corner of Coburg and Union streets last night broke up in disorder and in a scuffle that followed Andrew I. Stephens an onlooker, was assaulted. Some assertions as to conditions in England among the working classes were questioned by some among the gathering and the discussion was at fever heat when a socialist orator made reference to politics. In the present state of the public mind with an election on it, it proved the last straw and he was rushed to the sidewalk. Apparently the victim of the assault was a listener only, and it is not clear just why he was attacked. He was struck violently on the nose and sent off the sidewalk into the street. When the police arrived, the aggressor or aggressors had disappeared.

DR. MELVIN'S ADVICE ON THE USING OF DISINFECTANTS

Dr. George G. Melvin, medical health officer, today gives the following advice regarding contagious diseases—

In cases of contagious disease and where there seems to be danger of contagion, resort is often had to disinfectants. This, of course, is a very proper step to take, but every one should be aware that in practice, disinfectants no matter of what kind, cannot be absolutely relied upon as a protection against poisonous germs.

They should not be made a substitute for cleanliness or that constant care necessary to preserve the person and premises from substances favoring the production of the disease breeding poison. One has not done his whole duty when he applies a quantity of carbolic acid or chloride lime to a foul garbage heap in the back yard.

Certainly it is better to do this than to do nothing, yet, it is surely evident that the best and logical thing to do is to get rid of the garbage altogether.

But disinfectants are some time used in an entirely useless way and in these instances, their employment is really worse than doing nothing, for it creates a false confidence that may be very serious results.

Examples of this mistaken trust in antiseptics are the sprinkling of them in irregular intervals, the setting upon the stove of weak solutions of carbolic acid so that its odor may permeate the apartment and the use of many of the patent and much advertised combinations on the market, the real usefulness of which is apt to be in inverse proportion to their cost. It should be borne in mind that antiseptic, in order to be efficient must be brought into absolute contact with the germ and in sufficient strength.

As bad odors are rarely of themselves hurtful, being merely danger signals, to put us on our guard, so also sharp and acid smells from the presence of antiseptics are generally useless as a means of destroying bacteria. "Be warned therefore the presence of a bad smell does not mean that there are very many things that are more or less efficiently as disinfectants, but for household use three only are worth considering. These are heat, carbolic acid and chloride of lime. There are two or three others equally efficient, but of so violent a nature as to forbid their use except under strict professional supervision.

Of the three mentioned, heat in the form of boiling water is by far the best, the most certain and the readiest obtainable. It is of course restricted somewhat in its application, for there are a good many things in household use we cannot boil without destroying.

Yet, upon reflection, the multitude of things we can boil with little or no damage to them is surprising. If an article be immersed in boiling water for one hour it is almost always safe to regard it as free from contagion. It must be remembered, however, that merely plunging a substance in boiling water or dashing boiling water upon it is not as safe a plan to destroy poisonous life.

Such a process leaves many varieties of germs and the parts of germs we call spores, almost as active as ever. Prolonged boiling is essential to safety.

Next month something may be said upon carbolic acid and chloride of lime as disinfectants.

BIG CUNARD AT HALIFAX; COAL SUPPLY IS SHORT

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 6 (Special).—The Cunard liner Germania, arrived here this morning short of coal. She left Plymouth with a scant supply owing to the strike, but would have reached New York had not she encountered heavy head winds and gales. She sent a wireless here that she would require coal. On entering this harbor a slight accident happened to her machinery and she will have to remain here two or three days.

She has 1,200 passengers, some of whom will leave tonight for New York by rail. The Germania is the largest ship which ever entered Halifax harbor with the exception of the Great Eastern. The Cunard line was born here, but it is thirteen years since a steamer of that line has been here.

SAVES ALL QUIET IN MEXICO

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 6.—An interesting visitor in the city is Aurelio Diaz, of Mexico. He is not related to the late president but is an official in the Bank of London in Mexico and has brought his sons here to be educated.

"How is the revolution when you left Mexico?" he was asked.

"It is all quieted down again," he responds. "Any word of a new revolution is not correct. It is all perfectly quiet. The people of Mexico are waiting anxiously for election of Diaz, the president which will be held next month. There are only two candidates in the field and it is Gen. Francisco Madero and the other is Gen. Reyes."

A DISGRACEFUL ROW

A disgraceful street row took place yesterday near the Suspension Bridge on the Fairville side, and those who saw it were indignant over the affair and say that it should be thoroughly investigated. Three men were concerned in it, and it was for a time a regular "free-for-all." Another man was also acting indecently. Some one cried out that the police were coming, and the men dispersed, one pulling another aboard a street car, dragging him by the hair. Specially to ladies on the car, it was a disgraceful scene.

The affair was the cause of much talk and the officials, it was felt, should look into the matter in an endeavor to have an arrest made. The incident was expressed that some of the bystanders or some one connected with the railroad must know at least one of the offenders, and this should be a start in bringing them to task for their unseemly conduct.
