NEW CRIME DETECTORS

French Scientist Uses Poroscopy and Graphometry to Catch Criminals.

Paris, Sept. 1.—Poroscopy and graphometry are two new "sciences" intended to make the way of the transgressor harder than it is. Poroscopy is the science of measuring the pores of the body. Graphometry is the science of form and relative proportion of letters in handwriting.

Dr. Edmond Locard, head of the Lyons police laboratory of identification, has elaborated these new methods of crime detection to a point where the results have been accepted in the Lyons court and are said to have proved effective.

In poroscopy Dr. Locard holds the number, form and position of body pores remain the same throughout life. The impression of the pores, in Dr. Locard's system, is colored by chemical vapors or very fine powders so that they may be photographed under a microscope.

Dr. Locard tells of several successful prosecutions supported by his new sciences. In one case a burglar wore gloves, but left an impression of a small surface of forearm. That trace convicted him. Another burglar, perspiring freely, left the impression of pure surfaces through his gloves—and went to jail.

Graphometry, as termed by Dr. Locard, consists primarily in the theory that handwriting shows always a certain relation in size between letters and unimistakeable characteristics in form, particularly of loops. In addition to these principles, Dr. Locard utilizes generally accepted methods of detecting forgeries.
