pondent of the waily Telegraph 'again to-day sends interesting additional details of the naval battle received from Moji, Sasebo and other ports.

It is stated that when Rear-Admiral Nebogatoff surrendered, the Russians she will probably be used to convey any hoisted red flags on their topmasts with Russian flags below them. The crews were drawn up in parade order on the decks and some of the sailors were waving white flags. The whole affair, the dispatch says, was a "Contemptible spec-

The correspondent of the paper who witnessed the battle says that towards Cunet, when the fighting was most fierce, there were some sickening sights beyond human power of description.

The Sasebo correspondent describes some pathetic scenes. He saw exhausted fugitive Russian sailars striking on places beneath high cliffs in remote and cruiser Aurora, accompanied by the prodeserted parts where there were no roads. All of them were thirsty, hungry and over-wrought. A Japanese cruiser engaged in merciful search alone saved six hundred.

The same correspondent says that when the Japanese troops boarded the torpedo boat destroyer Bedovi, after completely disabling her, Admiral Rojestvensky was the last man to be disovered. He was hiding at the bottom of the destroyer, and was bleeding freey from many wounds.
The correspondent goes on to say: "It is understood that Admiral Nebogatoff, who is grateful for the kind treatment given him, by order of the Mikado, will be allowed to proceed home within a few days. His surrender was disgraceful and unaccountable. Examination of the ships show that the guns were rusty and the botoms of the vessels covered with seaweed, but there was no lack of fighting resources. There were heaps of ammunition and no traces of damages by the Japanese shells.'

Another correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that the captain of the interviewed admitted the foolishness of the Japanese navy is the finest in the world, the crew were so cool and brave as to appear almost like demons, and not his fleet for the port of Soual, about 120 that the Associated Press was able to
