

Two Strong Candidates Unanimously Chosen to Contest New Brunswick Constituencies--Hon. Mr. Blair and Sir Louis Davies Speak at Woodstock.

Woodstock, Sept. 19.—(Special)—The political demonstrations here this evening were one of the most successful which the old county of Carleton has seen for many a year. Liberals from all parts of the county had gathered at a convention during the afternoon and tendered a unanimous nomination to Mr. P. B. Carvell, M. P., who accepted. Sir Louis Davies and Hon. A. G. Blair arrived in the town in the morning and spent the day in conference with their political friends.

In the evening the Opera House was packed to the doors and many were unable to obtain admission. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed both with respect to the choice of Mr. Carvell and the speeches of the two ministers. Sir Louis and the minister of railways were in fine form and aroused the immense meeting to a high pitch of responsive feeling. There was no mistaking the sentiment of the gathering and the strong air of confidence which possessed the Liberals of the county on entering upon a struggle which promises to redeem the county. Mr. Carvell, who spoke first and was received with great cheering, thanked Sir Louis and Blair for the honor they had conferred upon him. The nomination would entail some business sacrifice upon him, but he said he could not allow Liberalism to suffer. The party had no mean fight to meet, but if the Liberals of the county rallied around him he believed victory was assured.

Sir Louis Davies, when the applause which greeted him had subsided, congratulated the Liberal party on their choice of a candidate. All signs pointed to the county being Liberal at heart and he confidently looked forward to the return of Mr. Carvell to strengthen the hands of the minister of railways. The struggle throughout the Dominion would soon be on and between parties the people would have to choose. The record of the Liberal party was familiar to everybody. When the Conservatives were returned in 1896 all knew how depressed were the commercial interests of the country, one hand there was a stagnation of business and the debt of the Dominion was piling up. All that had been changed. Times were good and hope filled the hearts of the people. The electors were being asked to drive out the men under whose administration this happy change had occurred. Sir Louis Davies spoke as if he were declaring everywhere that this was the result of the present campaign. The venerable baronet had been just as confident of the Conservative victory in 1896 and to the amusement of the meeting, Sir Louis read one of Sir Charles' prophecies in which he had asked never to be believed again if the Conservatives were not returned by a larger majority than they had. They then had a majority of 40 but when the voters were counted Sir Charles' Liberalism was the result of (laughter). It was being charged as a reason why the Liberals kept losing that they failed to keep their pledges and had done nothing to promote the interests of the country. Sir Louis then took up the platform of the Ottawa convention of 1896 and explained in a definite and explicit manner the very best thing Mr. Foster would do on the public platform, he said, was to take up the pledges of the Liberal party as embodied in that platform. On the contrary he always spoke of pledges which had never been given by the Liberal party. (Cheers.) This same Mr. Foster was posing as a great moral lecturer and at New Glasgow he had addressed himself to Christians telling upon them to abstain from wine and to keep their sacred pledges. Who was this man who mounted his pedestal to talk about higher morality than the principles which Sir Louis in an exceedingly forcible way, told the story of Mr. Foster's treachery to Sir Mackenzie Bowell in 1896 and followed it up by a tirade against the same gentleman's conduct on the temperance issue. Taking up the pledges of the Liberal party, Sir Louis then went on to say that as they appeared in the official report of the Ottawa convention, there had been no promise to introduce free trade nor to slash away all the duties but a reduction of the tariff to meet the needs of an economical and honest administration of public affairs. That reduction was made in 1897. (Applause.) As for the principle of free trade had been eliminated and a revenue tariff substituted, so that in that regard the pledge of the Liberal party had been faithfully kept.

Mr. Foster had asked if the price of staples were now any cheaper. The Liberal party had never promised to control prices. (Applause.) As for the principle of free trade, it was not a principle which was applied to the taxation of goods and that undertaking had been honestly carried out. (Cheers.) As an illustration, on cotton goods alone the tariff in 1896 was 23 per cent. and it was so with many classes. The effect of the British preference was to cheapen the British goods for the detriment of all that were sold in competition therewith. On woolen goods, the Foster tariff imposed a duty of from 50 to 55 per cent. In 1897 the present tariff had been reduced to 35 per cent. (Applause.) Next, the price of which Mr. Foster often alluded to, were now taxed at 35 cents per 100 pounds as against 70 cents under the former regime. On cotton there had been a small reduction in the duty and the privilege of importing in tanks had been granted. If Mr. Foster came to Woodstock would he say that the Conservatives, if returned to power, would restore the duties which had been reduced by the Liberals. Mr. Foster's system of averages in respect of the tariff was most misleading and did not reach the staple of life. In this connection, Sir Louis pointed out that the Liberals had made their tariff reductions without in any way touching the industries of Canada and passing from this subject he took up the pledge with respect to reciprocity and showed how honest an effort had been made to secure free trade relations with the United States. There has been no pledge to decrease the public debt. The Liberal party had in every good year reduced the debt and the Tories were adding six and a half millions a year, but the Liberals during four years had merely added $7,000,000 of that sum, $2,000,000 had been left by the Conservative to be paid so that the average annual increase had been but $1,000,000. The Liberals had therefore effected a saving against the Tory record of $5,000,000 per annum. (Cheers.) Immense public works and enterprises had been carried out for this small increase. The pledge of economy applied to expenditure as well. Individual Liberals had promised a reduction, but the party had not. The ex-

OVER SIXTY THOUSAND. Largest Attendance in the History of Exhibitions.

There is encouragement for the Exhibition Association in the attendance this year also in the fact that the patronage of the amusements has been good. Amusement hall receipts were larger than last year, but expenses were also greater, including the fitting up of the drill shed with stage and seats. Mr. W. S. Barker has been energetic and successful in his management of the amusements and lost no opportunity to improve the interests of his department. In connection with attractions it has been everywhere admitted that the fireworks were the best of the season. A comparative statement of the attendance at the last four exhibitions is as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Attendance. 1916: 100,000; 1917: 102,000; 1918: 105,000; 1919: 108,000.

A committee was appointed for the next annual meeting, to arrange date and programme. It was suggested that the date be as near the first of January as convenient.

The programme will be made up of the following subjects: 1. The best methods of procuring, breeding and caring for cattle and other live stock. 2. Special discussion on how best to promote the breeding of the most suitable horses. 3. How to encourage sheep raising in the province. 4. Profitable bee culture. Nothing More Comfortable. Rubber tires for our carriages will soon be a thing of only ordinary note. It has been found they add so much to the comfort of a drive. The Dunlop Tire Company, which has an exhibit in the fair, have made their name famous by their pneumatic tires for bicycles, carriages and automobiles and now make the 200 delegates to the convention. They add greatly to the life of the vehicle.

The name of Dunlop is famous in connection with tires and the excellence which made their pneumatic tires standards, is to be found in their solid rubber carriage tires. They make a carriage drive a luxury and add years to the life of a vehicle by countering the jolting and vibration of parts.

Peaceful Hand Laundry. The Peerless still continues to attract many visitors to its newly arranged booth in the gallery, and all are charmed with the neatness and efficiency of the work. The heating apparatus which Laskey & Bolton had ordered specially for this exhibition arrived too late to be put in place though every preparation had been made for it.

tion by their dispensing of the drinks of their manufacture, and they did a big business. They furnished a variety of beverages and all of excellent quality. This, however, is almost an unnecessary statement, for the fact that the company have a solidly established reputation for excellence and this is lived up to. Manager Armstrong was at the exhibition yesterday for the first time because they have been so busy at their headquarters in Sussex that he was unable to get away. Matters were well looked after, however. The company's business has extended much during the past year and in fact it has been difficult to keep up to orders. It is the result of the excellence of catering to the popular wants.

The Prizo List. Class 25—A-Milch Cow Competition. Messrs. J. F. Tilley, Harvey Mitchell and C. Duigan made the return of the milch cow competition yesterday. There were five entries. First prize was awarded to Logan Bros., Amherst Point, N. B. Second prize to Logan Bros., Cow Ida Bookie.

Mr. Harris Allan, superintendent of machinery hall, is always remembered by friends at the fair. This year Messrs. Thompson & Struffer, the Toronto opticians, presented him with a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles.

Kings county cattle did well in the matter of awards. First and second in the Hereford class were carried off by the bull calf and cow exhibited by Humphrey Davidson, of Amnargue.

The exhibition has been well assisted this year by competent officials of departments. Sergt. W. Baxter has been in charge of the police and Mr. Will Taylor has done yeoman service as superintendent of the grounds and buildings. Mr. Fred Dorman was again at the press and attendants' gate and some odd queries of the press were answered by Mr. Richard Coughlan who has presided at the amusement hall door and every satisfaction resulted to the association and the public.

Northern & Co. have purchased the exhibit of the Branford Starch Works, which was shown at the prize lists of works, and held a conference with the exhibitor, omission was made of the awards to Mr. J. D. Coes of 191 Prince street, Carleton in the Houdan class. He won first and second prizes for his mottled Houdans, cocklers and pullets.

Charlotte County Appreciates Government's Enterprise. The merchants of Sussex are taking much interest in the exhibition and will assist in making success by exhibits. Some St. John firms will also exhibit. The management has arranged for attractions additional to the live stock, agricultural and industrial departments and chief of these will be horse races. There will be two days of racing—Tuesday and Wednesday, 2nd and 3rd prox. The race will be on the new track which is within a minute's walk of the fair grounds. There will be $1,000 hung up in purses for the following events: Tuesday—235 class, 235 class and 3 minute class. Wednesday—Free-for-all, and 220 class. Pevey Hill of Toronto, who supplied the attractions at the St. John exhibition, to secure for the Sussex show three performers—Miss Bessie Gilbert, lady cornetist, who made such a successful appearance at St. John a few years ago; Frank La Monte, who does a comedy high wire performance which he calls "Fun on a clothes line"; and Auguste Duell, who was here last year and had all in wonderment at his rope work. These performers will appear in the fair building and will be seen without extra charge.

There is being arranged with I. C. R. the running of a fast special train from St. John to Sussex on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings of the exhibition. The train will leave St. John about 10.30 and there will be opportunity to see the fair, attend the races, and return to St. John in the early evening or later if desirable. Excursions will come to Sussex during the exhibition from St. Stephen, Woodstock, Fredericton and on the I. C. R. as far north as Newcastle and east as Amherst.
