The Latter chatted gayly enough, but young Walworth seemed uneasy, restless, nervous. It may have been the turning backward of his thoughts and memoriate to that fatal morning in the Sturtevant House, the result of which had so changed the whole course and current of his young life. It may have been the horse of a peaceful interview to settle family difficulties; i vited to a seat in your room and apparently almost instantly confronted with a weapon of death in his own soa's hands, what thoughts must have rushed upon him at that moment, when he found that the person wbom he expected had come to him for the purpose of a peaceful interview to settle family difficulties; i vited to a seat in your room and apparently almost instantly confronted with a weapon of death in his own soa's hands, what thoughts must have rushed upon him at that moment, when he found that the person wbom he expected had come to him for the purpose of a peaceful interview to settle family difficulties; i vited to a seat in your room and apparently almost instantly confronted with a weapon of death in his own soa's hands, what thoughts must have rushed upon him affected him; it may have been the turning backward of his thoughts and memoriate to that fatal morning in the Sturte-vant House, the result of which had so a seat in your come and apparently almost instantly confronted with a weapon of death in his own soa's hands, what thoughts m

He wiped the perspiration from his brow. He silently shook hands with his friends. He spoke scarcely a word to any of them. Hope had fled from his heart. Care had cankered him. Who knows but it may be remorse? He had disguised it in the court room, but he could not disguise it now. But how quickly he changed! Judge Davis at half past ten o'clock had arrived, and he was summoned into the court room. He came into the room with a quick step, his friends filing after him. All his old easy, self-confident manner had come back to him. He took his customary seat, and his mother her seat on his right and little Tracy the one on the left. Directly in front of him sat his counsel, Mr. Charles O'Conor and Judge Garvin, Mr. Beach being absent. He whispered something to Mr. O'Conor and then began fanning himself with his hat. He spoke also to his mother. It was the same Frank Walworth that had been on trial through eight long days. The crier opened the Court. There was breathless silence throughout the room.

MOVING FOR EENTENCE.

MOVING FOR SENTENCE. District Attorney Phelps slowly rose in his seat and addressed the Court as follows:—The trial of Frank Walworth for the murder of Mansfield Tracy Walworth has terminated by a verdict by an impartial jury of murder in the second degree. It is my duty, and I now move that the Court mass sentence upon the prison-the Court pass sentence upon the prison-er in accordance with the verdict pro-nounced against him. WALWORTH NOTHING TO SAY.

WALWORTH NOTHING TO SAY.

"Walworth, arise," said Mr. Sparks, the Clerk, as soon as the District Attorney had taken his seat.

Young Walworth did as bidden, holding his hat carelessly in his right hand and throwing his head back at that peculiar angle, his face at the same time having that peculiarly semi-sneering expression so notably characterizing him throughout the trial. He looked Mr. Sparks steadily in the eye. throughout the trial. He looked Mr. Sparks steadily in the eye.

"What have you to say," continued Mr. Sparks, following the usual formula in such cases, "why judgment of the Court should not now be pronounced against you according to law?"

Walworth brought his left hand, which had been hanging by his side, up to his lace, strightened himself back and moved slightly from his position. It certainly

Independent of the property of Judge Davis, as if in doubt whether the prisoner intended to say anything, waited fully half a minute, and then proceeded to pass sentence. At the times his voice trembled, and once or twice he seemed as though his voice would choke in the depth of his emotion. He spoke as follows:—"Wa'worth, 1 have never been called upon in my life to perform a more painful duty than the one which devolves upon me now. After a trial in which you have had the benefit of counsel not surpassed, if equalled, in ability and stantially by yourself, you have been convicted of the crime of murder in the second degree. The punishment of that second degree. The punishment of that crime is fixed by statute. No discretion is left to the Court. It is severe, but as the Court deems your case it is none too severe. It separates you from your friends and your family and consigns you for life to the State Prison, from which you probably can have no hope of second you probably can have no hope of escape unless, possibly, at some future day, through Executive clemency. The evidence in your case, in my judgment, fully JUSTIFIES THE VERDICT

The following are the rates charged for demand of the Sentence by Judge Davis in the Court Room.

Nom the N. Y. Heald, July 6th.

The fate of young Walworth has been settled. He goes to State Prison for life. Such at least was the sentence passed upon him yesterday by Judge Davis in the Court of Oyer and Terminer. In the Court of Oyer and Terminer, and almost immediately shooting almost immediately shooting a integrity and for all the private virtues that advance and elevate man second to none who have adorned so high a station. And, on the other hand, a grandfather on the mother's side fell nobly fighting for his country on the field of battle, and left a record of which sill his descendants may be proud. It is with grief that I feel bound to express my sorrow that the memory of those great and distinguished ancestors should not have restrained you from the commission of such a crime as that of which you are convicted. Your poor mother had, indeed, great cause to regret her relations to the father you have slain. You also, undoubtedly, had great cause to feel not aggrieved merely, but ashained and indignant at the long course of outrages toward her and toward his family; but, bad-as he was, you were not to be the
