Mr. Gough moved a three months' as population. Small and thickly settled districts were more easily looked after than the large ones. Carleton, Kent and Gloucester should have an additional of the executive?

Mr. Lindsay: Five.

Mr. Coram did not think it would do for every member of Government to have a portfolio. It would lead to have a portfolio. It would lead to abuses.

Mr. O'Leary said there was truth in saying that the north members stuck together. They left Kent out in the cold; Mr. Mitchell had done it at Ottawa, and Mr. Kelly was doing it here; Kent wanted justice done her.

Hon. Mr. Kelly said Mr. O'Leary seemed to take a particular fancy in having a rap at him whenever he could. He had a great interest himself in Kent, as he did business in that county to a great extent, and there was no section of the country in which the roads and bridges are good and expensive ones. His department did every justice to Kent.

Mr. Phillips said Restigouche was large in area, but some two thousand of her population had gone to the southern counties, where they were employed on public works; hence her small show in the census returns. Mr. Hanington said the principle of representation by pupulation has never been the recognized one in New Brunswick, but area as well has been taken into consideration. The present bill does not meet the case. The next House will be he proper in to deal with this scheme, though if what is said to be its principle is to be adopted, the provincial electoral districts should be reconstructed. The matter will, no doubt, be discussed with the question of a legislative union of the Maritime Provinces, and there should be no reduction of our representation until that question is settled. If the Provinces are not united it would be better to increase the representation: There is a feeling against removing the old landmarks, and our important interests point to increase: He would like to see Carleton have fair play. On motion of Mr. Lindsay progress was reported, with leave to sit again, and the matter was referred to a Comnittee—Mesers. Lindsay, Hibbard and Gough. mines.

Mr. Hasington gave similar notice, asking for a statement of the expenses of the Executive since the seventh of March last, with the names of the individuals to whom the several amounts were paid, and on what account; what amounts are now due, etc.; also notice of a call for the papers relating to the employment of teachers in District No. 2, Westmoreland, and the cancelling of the appointment of E. V. Tait, a teacher. FREDERICTON, Feb. 19. After routine this morning Hon. Mr. Crawford committed a bill to authorize might be in reged together for the pur | would be permanent. might be in riged together for the purposes of representation.

Mr. Covert said Sunbury did not want to be merged into Queen's. Mr. Lindsay might bring in a measure to increase the representation of his own county, and he would support it. He did not think the people demanded a change.

Mr. Hibbard said he would sooner see three members added to our representation than one struck off. The money to be saved was not, to his mind, any inducement to upport this scheme.

Mr. Gough and that he rather favored bury had, on application of the candibe saved was not, to his mind, any indicement to import this scheme.

Mr. Gough said that he rather favored the reduction of representatives a few years ago, but in view of the increasing importance of our various interests, it would not be wise to diminish the deliberative power or numerical strength of the Assembly. The more representatives there are the less liable will the House be to be manifolded by the individuals and large companies controlling heavy interests in the Profince. It may be fair enough to ask for a readjustment of the representation, but the principle of representation by population was not at all carried out in the bill, for while it gives 18,810 people two representatives, it gives the save private of their election. representation, but the principle of representation by population was not at all carried out in the bill, for, while it gives it, $10 people two representatives, it gives the same number to 5,575. In rederal constitutions it is a recognized principle that local representation, because of the greater variety of interests involved in the former. The mover might take the sense of the House on an increase of representation for the counties not fairly provided for now, and change his measure. The nothern counties representatives will, no doubt, stand together in opposing the bill in its present form. More takent, thought and judgment are generally found in large bodies than in small ones. The proposed reduction of representation prior to 1867 was one of the canvasses used to assist in bringing about Confederation, and now that we had experience to guide us in Confeders tion, that experience is egalast reduced representation. Our legislation deals with nearly as large and important a variety of subjects as it did before Confederation, and an increase of representation was more desirable than a diminution.

Hon. Mr. Willis thought Mr. Lindsay tion.

Hon. Mr. Willis thought Mr. Lindsay had added few arguments to back up his proposition; he had failed to approach in his Bill the embodiment of the principle he laid down, for the re adjustment of representation, by population, was not at all carried out in the Bill. He gives us St. John one member to every 14,491 persons, while in Restigouche he gives one to every 2,787. If a reduction was to be made it might be well done by taking the St. John representation as:

Mr. Wedderourn said that, while Mr. Wedderourn said that will be well done by substituted the word "Rothesay" in the bill in place of Hampton. It would be easy, for electors to understand the c tion as polls. They could, under the bill, leave Mr. O'Leary said Carleton and Kent were not properly represented under the present system, and thought due regard should be given to territorial size as well Bay View Hotel on Thursday evening. than the large ones. Carleton, Kent and Gloucester should have an additional member each.

Mr. Maher said the Bill was only a thickering measure, and that there was no evidence of a principle in it. He pointed out what he thought were its inconsistencies, such as giving two members to Restigouche, with some five thousand population, while St. John with fifty-six thousand was given only four. A Bill which would cure the evil justly complained of must be based on principle, and not be a mere catch vote or matter of expediency. The expense of two or three additional members would not be a great matter; to reduce the representation would create dissribing and the proportion, but would give some other considered as well as population. A member could do a great deal more to a densely populated district than he could in one sparsely settled.

Mr. Coram said the population of St. John, city and county, was 52,305, which gave one member to every 8,717 of the people. If the number of members is to be reduced, what would be the number of the executive?

Mr. Lindsay: Five.
