

Wellington items

Visitors were at the home of our new arrival from a distance in the country. Mrs. E. A. Greer's last week. There are not many vacant houses in Wellington at present, still a number want to sell their property. Miss Mary Dooland of Miss' Corners was in town Friday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Douglass Dingman of Florida were recent visitors at Tara Hall. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Young and Miss Mabel have arrived home from below Kingston where they attended quarterly meeting of Friends. We are sorry to report that Miss Stapleton is not much improved. Miss Edna Fitzgerald was at Toronto last week. Mrs. Lambert of Cherry Valley was visiting her niece, Mrs. W. W. Fitzgerald last week.

There were not as many Wellington people attending Toronto Fair this year as on former occasions, but all who went report a good fair. We are pleased to report that all our Northwest friends who visited us this summer have arrived home safe and sound. Bread has advanced in price, but a number are beginning to bake. All were pleased to read Kenneth Ferguson's letter in the Picton Times this week. Our stores are now receiving new fall goods. Mr. John S. Shurie will have a fine looking residence when completed. Mr. L. K. Shreds is to convert the house where Mr. Shurie now lives into a double house to rent. Mr. Robert Evans has returned to his home in Rochester after visiting friends here.

A number of hogs were shipped away this week. Mr. Wm. Hubbs is having a house built on his lot. Our Belleville campers have returned home. The ladies are still busy sewing and knitting for our soldier boys. Mrs. Wolf and daughter have returned to their home in Montreal. Mrs. L. Luffman and Lena spent a day at Picton last week. Mr. John A. Howman has returned from a visit at Toronto. The D. G. Jackson family spent an evening with Mr. W. Atkin at the farm last week.

Mrs. Thompson's funeral was on Friday last. Interment was at Glenwood cemetery, Picton. A number of the W.M.S. of the Methodist church went to visit Mcville W.M.S. on Thursday afternoon. A report an enjoyable time. Mr. and Mrs. George Tompsett of Gore were callers here on Saturday. Mrs. Louisa Ainsworth and her daughter visit her on Sunday last. Much sympathy is extended to Mrs. David Thom on the death of her brother at Chatham. Mrs. M. Clapp is with her daughter Mrs. Herbert Hubbs for a visit at Hubbs' Creek. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Morden were at Toronto last week. Mr. and Mrs. John N. MacDonald are much pleased with their new home at East Wellington.

Mr. and Mrs. David H. Spencer have returned to their home at Picton after visiting here. House-cleaning is the order of the day around here. Miss Dingman of Picton visited Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Dingman at Tara Hall East Wellington last week. Mr. Hilton Reynolds and sister have a friend from Rochester visiting them last week. Mr. Homer Stuart of British Columbia, and Miss Martha Stuart, nurse of Rochester spent last week at East Wellington under the parental roof. Mr. Norman Kidd was in town last week. Our postmaster was at Toronto last week. Mrs. T. M. Nash and Mrs. Blake Hall were at Toronto last week. Mrs. Thomas Hardy and Mrs. Melvin Cronk visited their daughters at Toronto last week. Mr. Frank Gibson was at Toronto for the races last week. Mrs. W. S. Hollingsworth of Picton visited her father, Mr. George Webster here last week. Carpenters will be busy this week at A. M. Osborne's bungalow. W. W. Fitzgerald in the contractor. Mr. Clayton Morden will move in the place vacated by Mrs. Joan D. Sinson. Mrs. J. D. Sinson is visiting in Toronto. Mrs. H. MacDonald was at Toronto on a visit last week. Mr. Harold Fitzgerald of Linwood, spent a recent Sunday here with his parents. Mrs. M. Ferguson of Lake Shore was visiting her daughter, Mrs. L. Dooland on Saturday. Mrs. L. Ferguson and two daughters of Lake Shore were in town on Saturday. Wm. Sison, teacher at Crofton, spent Sunday at home. Gregg Haight will have a fine bungalow when finished. The men are busy working at it. Miss Allen of Napanee has been visiting in town for some weeks at Mrs. E. A. Greer's home. We are pleased to hear Mrs. Geo. Boyce is better after her recent illness. Mr. Boyce and Miss Clark of East Wellington were married at Yorkville last week. The young couple will reside here. We wish them happiness. Mrs. M. B. Trumpon was at Toronto last week visiting at P. B. Trumpon's.

Rev. Dr. Cobb and family will move in part of Mrs. Rankin's beautiful brick residence in East Wellington. We are glad to welcome L. W. Clark and family to Wellington. He has sold his farm and will reside here at Stirling last week. A family reunion. Mrs. Fred Harde and son of Buffalo, N.Y. are visiting at Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vanderwolf's in the country. A number of women are working at the canning factories. Tomatoes and corn are coming in daily to the factories. Mrs. L. P. Hobbs of Hillier was in town Saturday afternoon. Nurse Cronk has returned to Yorkville N.Y. after visiting at Toronto, Belleville and Wellington. Mrs. Pratt and baby of Colborne, spent a few days last week with her sister, Miss McCullough, East Wellington. A fine baby girl was left at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Way last week. Miss Kathleen Davidson, nurse of Clifton Springs is home at "The Cedars" for her holidays.

THOMASBURG.

Mrs. Thomas Palmer of Peterboro is spending a few days here. Mr. and Mrs. Angus Martin of Belleville spent two days last week at Mr. S. Mayne's. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Embury visited last Monday. Mrs. E. Way spent last Monday at Mr. W. Embury's. Mr. Milton Knowles of Tweed spent Wednesday night here. Melons have gone up in our town selling at fifty cents a piece. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Maynes spent last Sunday at Mr. E. Mayne's of Plainfield. Mr. Irwin Bateman and Miss Lillie Bateman spent a few days visiting their brother, Dr. R. Bateman of Bolton. Mr. H. Brewer spent a few days visiting friends in Hamilton last week. Mrs. M. Hamilton and Miss E. Porter spent one day last week at Mr. T. Rutherford of Roslin. Mr. D. McCann of East Channel, spent Sunday night at Mr. Lee's. Miss Mary Morton is visiting at Mr. Allan Morton's of Belleville for a few days. Miss Mary Hawley of Watertown is visiting at Mr. Ed. Kerr's for a few days. Mrs. J. D. Embury spent two days at Mr. George Kerr's of Belleville. Mr. and Mrs. Ed Way visited at Mr. and Mrs. Westover's of Sidney last Saturday and Sunday. Mrs. Thomas Morton and Miss P. Morton are spending two weeks at Mr. Allan Morton's, Belleville. A large number attended the camp meeting last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. L. Ketcheson, Mr. and Mrs. Murney Coulter attended the Tamworth fair last Thursday. We congratulate Mr. Geo. Sherrin on taking three first prizes in cheese at Belleville fair. Mr. and Mrs. Will Kerr spent Sunday at Mr. John Ketcheson's of Chisholm Mills. A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. James Elliott on Wednesday evening, Sept. 9th at 8 o'clock when her eldest daughter, Cassie, became the bride of Mr. Matthew English. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Coon of Tweed.

CROOKSTON.

Crookston, Sept. 14.—Nearly everyone took in camp meeting on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. James Chambers and family of Amport are visiting at Wm. Chambers's of this place. Miss Emma Lancaster of Toronto, is holidaying at her home here. Misses Emma Burkitt and Winnie Sleeper, visited Miss Victoria Vincent last week. A Harvest Festival service will be held in the hall on Wednesday evening. Service to be taken by the Tweed minister. Mrs. Fred Blackburn of Healy Falls visited at her uncle's last week. Mrs. W. McKnight and Miss Elizabeth Wickens, are visiting at their home here. Mrs. Adam Kilpatrick is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Robt. Wright of Chatham. Mr. J. L. Woods of Chatham, who has been visiting relatives and friends in this neighborhood, received word on Saturday of his brother William's sudden death and returned home at once.

SINE.

Sine, Sept. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. German Bailey and family, motored to Toronto last Thursday. Miss Ella Brown of Stirling, was the guest of Miss Gladys Tucker, on Sunday. Quite a number of people, both young and old attended the camp meeting at Inverloche on Sunday. Mr. Gilbert Thompson is having a well drilled. It is hoped that he will have lots of water. The thrashing outfit is still in the neighborhood, stirring up the usual amount of dust. Miss Gladys Seward has returned to her home at Wallbridge after spending a few days with her cousin, Miss Vera Sine. Quite a number attended the patriotic meeting at Harold, on Monday evening. Mrs. McDougall of Eldorado and Miss Keitha and Josephine Sine, were the guests of Mrs. G. M. Sine on Monday. Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Sine and family were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Walker on Sunday. Miss Vera Sine has returned home, after spending a few days with relatives at Wallbridge. Mrs. Wm. Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Tucker motored to Belleville on Thursday. Miss Bertha Green was the guest of Mrs. Mowat Denike, on Sunday.

End of Escapade.

A boy from Smith's Falls who has been following the shows was this morning sent home after a week's escapade stay in Belleville. His companion had been sent to the Children's Shelter but he managed to escape.

FRONT OF THURLOW.

Thurlow, Sept. 15th.—A number of the patrons of Thurlow cheese factory attended the public meeting held at the factory last night to ascertain the feelings of the people in regard to sending one day's milk to be manufactured and used in the interests of the Patriotic Fund. Mr. F. E. O'Byrne of Belleville was present and gave a very able and instructive address on the war situation, which, as he has been over the ground where battles are now being fought, was very interesting to his hearers. The patrons were unanimous in deciding to contribute one day's milk to the fund. Mr. Vivian Bradshaw and family, have removed to their new home on the 3rd con. of Trondinga. Mrs. E. A. Farwell is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Parke's at Philadelphia. Mr. F. S. Purdy, has resingled his house, just recently. Mrs. Aime Garbutt attended Brighton fair, on Thursday and Friday. Miss S. E. Han has returned home after spending some weeks with friends in Napanee. Mrs. Alina Bradshaw is visiting friends in Oshawa. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hall, 2nd con. spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Grass. Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bannett, sr. spent Sunday with friends on the 8th con.

TURNER SETTLEMENT.

The Chatterton Women's Institute met at the home of Mr. Wm. Griffin Friday, Sept. 11th. Miss Parker and Miss Coulter of the Stirling Institute spoke on behalf of the Red Cross and showed how the women of Canada might help supply the army hospitals at the front. The funeral of the late Mr. W. Hough took place from Prince Edward county to the Baptist cemetery here, on Monday, September 14th. The work on the Baptist church is progressing favorably. The most difficult task is painting the tower. Passers all stop to watch the steeplejack lean over and paint the cornice. The reopening will take place Sept. 27th.

FRANKFORD.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church met at the home of Mrs. John Windover, Thursday afternoon, Sept. 10th. There was a small crowd as the Toronto exhibition was being held. We are pleased to see Miss Miller home again. The canning factory is canning tomatoes and corn these days. A number from here have attended the Toronto exhibition. A number of men are busy clearing the school grounds purchased from Mrs. Conner. Don't forget the Frankford fair Sept. 17th and 18th. The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler was buried on Saturday afternoon. The family have the sympathy of the community in this their time of sorrow and bereavement. The contractors of the canal have finished the work on the canal formerly owned by Mr. Alex. Beatty. Rev. C. G. Williams of Concession arrived in town on Saturday. He preached in the Methodist church on Sunday evening to a large crowd. Every body was delighted to see and hear him again. Service was held in Trinity Church on Sunday morning at 11. Mrs. Alex. Beatty is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lowery.

RIVER VALLEY.

Mrs. T. J. Smith has returned home after spending a week in Toronto. Mr. Wm. Turnbull and Miss Viola Turnbull and Miss Meel of Toronto, spent Sunday at Mr. W. Busk's. Mr. R. N. Bird preached a good sermon here, on Sunday. We are sorry to hear Mr. Chas. Wilks is not gaining very fast. Quite a number from here attended camp meeting at Frankton, on Sunday. Mrs. Mary Vandervoort and Mr. Robert Bush attended the Ross-Lansing wedding on Thursday last. Rev. Mr. Terrell took tea at Mrs. W. H. Hanna, on Tuesday night. The men had a bee and sawed Mr. Wilks' wood, one day this week. Mrs. E. Hoard is attending Peterboro fair to-day.

OAK HILLS.

Many from here spent Sunday at Ivanhoe camp meeting. Mr. and Mrs. J. Chambers of Arnprior visited the former's brother, Mr. Robert, over Sunday. Several from here attended the Lansing-Ross wedding on Tuesday. The happy couple have the best wishes of the community. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sals entering soon of their young friends on Wednesday. Frank was very liberal with his melons. Misses Elsie Eggleton and Lillian Bronson were at Mrs. W. R. Stapley on Sunday. Mrs. Frank and Mrs. Milton Bird were both on the sick list last week.

POINT ANNE.

Miss Ellen Gibson is visiting friends here. Mr. Ross and Miss Campbell are teaching here in our school. Mr. James of Belleville is boarding in our neighborhood. Miss Bauer is working in Harb's store. Alex. McDonald of Rochester is visiting friends here. Miss Mildred MacDonald has relatives at length visit in Rochester. We are sorry to hear that Mrs. Rankin's baby is dead. We are pleased to hear that Mrs. Seneor is improving. Mrs. James McDonald and daughter have returned to spend the winter in Rochester with the former's daughter. We expect to hear wedding bells before long. Mrs. John Rows and her daughter, Mrs. Dr. Caverly of Trenton, are guests of Rev. and Mrs. Meyers and Mrs. Willis, this week.

INFORMATION.

Sept. 14th, 1914. Year after year for 43 years the Young Men's Christian Association has conducted work among the Canadian Militia at their Annual Training Camps. This work has so improved itself that His Royal Highness, the Governor-General, has graciously consented to become Patron, the Militia Council has given it official recognition, commandants of camps have stated that they would not want to conduct a camp to the country, and the men expect to find the "Y.M.C.A." to look for it and make large use of it. At the time of the Boer War the Canadian Associations sent Messrs. Howard Brice and T. E. Rest with one of the Canadian contingents during the Spanish-American War, the North American Associations, through their International Committee, followed the American soldiers to their State Camps, and the mobilization of the boys and the Philippine campaign in the Russo-Japanese War, American (U.S. and Canada) and Japanese Y.M.C.A. Secretaries accompanied the Japanese army to the front. So impressed was the value of the work and appreciative of the services rendered was the Emperor of Japan, that he gave $5,000 gold towards defraying the expense involved. Immediately upon the outbreak of the present war between Britain and Germany the Canadian National Council offered its services to the Canadian Militia Department for work at the mobilization camp and overseas. Canadian hearts go out towards the 30,000 men of our Canadian troops at Valenciennes and there the Canadian National Council of Young Men's Christian Associations is working for the welfare, comfort and convenience of these men. Our equipment consists at present of three large tents and we are considering the feasibility of duplicating this. Ten thousand letter-heads and five thousand envelopes daily are being distributed to the men gratis. The average daily sale of postage stamps is over $800, picture post-cards, largely military and patriotic are sold; tables, pens and ink are provided. This department alone takes the time of three men. "The Dry Campaign" is a pamphlet, "Germany's Fateful Hour," in which that officer spoke of England's "stealthily planned" plans against Germany, France's thirst for revenge, and Russia's hatred of all things Teutonic. RECEIVED IRON CROSS. But now this youthful advocate of militarism finds the way which he believed imminent, actually under way. And, instead of "banishment" and repression, he has received from his father, the emperor, the much-coveted Iron Cross for a brilliant victory placed to his credit against the French in Lorraine. It would certainly appear that the fire-eater has come into his own with a vengeance. In the manner of man he is becoming a matter of general interest, and, to supply the information, a book called "Der Kropfprin," by Dr. Paul Liman, has made its opportune appearance in Germany. Dr. Liman gains an attractive portrait of the Kaiser's hair. In spite of all his vagaries, we learn that he is popular throughout Germany, totally devoid of "side," and the keenest sort of a sportsman. However, we hear of him as a diligent reader of books, especially on history, and as a warm admirer of Napoleon, despite the fact that the great Corsican humbled "army to the dust" in his campaigns. In Napoleon, says Dr. Liman, the Crown Prince sees not a "harvest" but a genuinely great man.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

THE GERMAN CROWN PRINCE. Similar measures were contemplated after the Crown Prince's praise of Lieut.-Col. Frobenius' recently published pamphlet, "Germany's Fateful Hour," in which that officer spoke of England's "stealthily planned" plans against Germany, France's thirst for revenge, and Russia's hatred of all things Teutonic. RECEIVED IRON CROSS. But now this youthful advocate of militarism finds the way which he believed imminent, actually under way. And, instead of "banishment" and repression, he has received from his father, the emperor, the much-coveted Iron Cross for a brilliant victory placed to his credit against the French in Lorraine. It would certainly appear that the fire-eater has come into his own with a vengeance. In the manner of man he is becoming a matter of general interest, and, to supply the information, a book called "Der Kropfprin," by Dr. Paul Liman, has made its opportune appearance in Germany. Dr. Liman gains an attractive portrait of the Kaiser's hair. In spite of all his vagaries, we learn that he is popular throughout Germany, totally devoid of "side," and the keenest sort of a sportsman. However, we hear of him as a diligent reader of books, especially on history, and as a warm admirer of Napoleon, despite the fact that the great Corsican humbled "army to the dust" in his campaigns. In Napoleon, says Dr. Liman, the Crown Prince sees not a "harvest" but a genuinely great man.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

Present War May Cure Kaiser's Hair of His Bellicose Tendencies

THE Crown Prince of Germany, the Kaiser's eldest son, has apparently come into his own, so far as fighting is concerned, although whether or not the outcome will be to his liking is a story yet unfinished. Indications are that it will not. For years he has been a leading advocate of a warlike policy for Germany. He has identified himself entirely with the army. He has resented anything that bore the faintest resemblance to a slur upon it, enthusiastically commended utterances of a militaristic tendency, and became at times so outspokenly belligerent that his imperial father was compelled to curb his ardor. An instance of this was his banishment to Danzig a few years ago; and it was authoritatively reported that similar measures were contemplated after the Crown Prince's praise of Lieut.-Col. Frobenius' recently published pamphlet, "Germany's Fateful Hour," in which that officer spoke of England's "stealthily planned" plans against Germany, France's thirst for revenge, and Russia's hatred of all things Teutonic. RECEIVED IRON CROSS. But now this youthful advocate of militarism finds the way which he believed imminent, actually under way. And, instead of "banishment" and repression, he has received from his father, the emperor, the much-coveted Iron Cross for a brilliant victory placed to his credit against the French in Lorraine. It would certainly appear that the fire-eater has come into his own with a vengeance. In the manner of man he is becoming a matter of general interest, and, to supply the information, a book called "Der Kropfprin," by Dr. Paul Liman, has made its opportune appearance in Germany. Dr. Liman gains an attractive portrait of the Kaiser's hair. In spite of all his vagaries, we learn that he is popular throughout Germany, totally devoid of "side," and the keenest sort of a sportsman. However, we hear of him as a diligent reader of books, especially on history, and as a warm admirer of Napoleon, despite the fact that the great Corsican humbled "army to the dust" in his campaigns. In Napoleon, says Dr. Liman, the Crown Prince sees not a "harvest" but a genuinely great man.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all concerned about his productions. When he has finished a picture he humbly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents—a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, "still life," or a battle scene.

A HARD WORKER. He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow-officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officer, cheerfully observing: "Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine!" Dr. Liman writes for Germany where he is required to say things pretty much as admiringly. There are less pleasant stories of the Crown Prince, and one of them has it that it was another of his boyish exuberances which plunged Europe into the present war. And rumor also says when the Kaiser returned to Berlin and found "it has" happened he struck the prince in the anger. His story will probably have something to say on the subject later on.

During the Crown Prince's long stay in Danzig at the head of his regiment—a stay forced upon him as a punishment. It is said, for his obstreperousness in Berlin—the gave plenty of chance to those desirous of studying his character. This part of his career is summed up by Dr. Liman thus: "People qualified to judge declare that Crown Prince Wilhelm kept his regiment at Danzig in excellent shape. He knew every man and every horse, concerned himself with every detail of the service, gave personal attention to everything, and saw to it that he should not be accused of being a mere figurehead." Nor did his military duties take up all his time. Like his father, he has dabbled in the fine arts, his hair also has tried his hand