

A Legend of Old England.

When England was the land of battles, In sword-clash and in battle-axe, A hundred years ago, A Duke the name was strange, His name was Richard the Lionhearted, And he was a noble and a brave, And he was a noble and a brave, And he was a noble and a brave...

The Rights of Women.

The rights of women! What are they? The right to labor, love and pray, The right to weep with those who weep, The right to walk when others sleep, The right to quit the falling tear, The right to smother the howl of care, And whisper comfort to the despair, The right to watch the parting breath, To soothe and cheer the bed of death, To point to earth with happy smile, To point to heaven with joyful smile, The right to wander to and fro, And visit the lowly and the poor, The right to comfort and to bless, The right to comfort and to bless, The right to comfort and to bless...

MOY O'BRIEN.

A TALE OF IRISH LIFE.

By MISS SKRIBNOR ("MELBORA").

CHAPTER XXVII.

"O Martyr! the scorners may trample On his name, but they cannot trample On the young man, all finished by example! Will awake to the duties of his path, And vindicate your own work of truth, With the passionate ardor of youth." - Lady Wren.

When her grandfather look and talk as he did now, and to himself, instead of a wishbone, Lady Catherine set the mental tonic. Poor Moy could not speak much; indeed she was very quiet, but experienced a great enjoyment in merely watching Catherine. She was, as it were, borne up and along by her friend's brilliant talk like a quill case bird on a sparkling wave.

"I've something to tell you," said Lady Catherine, sitting down by the little table where Moy and Mr. Gilman had had their last discussion on Home Rule.

up in England among all classes a conviction that it will one day be an accomplished fact—not next year, nor the year after, nor we must have patience, but we shall have it yet. Then he said, "I am not a fanatical Tory, but I am a fanatical Englishman."

WORTH AND WEAKER.—Gentlemen, I referred for three days very severely from summer complaint and could not get relief but kept getting worse and worse till the pain was almost unbearable and I became very weak. Some friends advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and after I had taken the first dose I found much relief and it did not fail to cure me. I do not intend to be without these valuable pills as long as I can help it.

"August Flower"

Mrs. Sarah M. Black of Seneca, Mo., during the past two years has been afflicted with Neuralgia of the Head, Stomach and Womb, and writes: "My food did not seem to strengthen me at all and my appetite was very variable. My face was yellow, my head dull, and I had such pains in my left side. In the morning when I got up I would have a flow of mucus in the mouth, and a bad, bitter taste. Sometimes my breath became sharp and I had such queer, tumbling, palpitations sensations around the heart. I ached all day under the shoulder blades, in the left side, and down the back of my limbs. It seemed to be worse in the wet, cold weather of Winter and Spring; and whenever the spells came on, my feet and hands would turn cold, and I could get no sleep at all. I tried everywhere, and got no relief before using August Flower. Then the change came. It has done me a wonderful deal of good during the time I have taken it and is working a complete cure."
