The New British Land Tax

As the pending struggle between the lords and commons is nearing crisis, more general interest is being taken in Canada in the details of the budget. It is not to be denied that in reference to the land tax the situation resolves itself into an attack by the people on the land trust in the Old Country. And viewed from the more liberal ideas on land Lold. ing which prevail on this side of the water, the demand on the land trus is a mild ope.

When the land trust is referred to. half the land in the United Kingtom is held, in the form of great estates, sapidly gain weight and by a few thousand prople, while health on small doses. there are thirty million people, own-Ing no land still, who are obliged to pay any rent for the holdings they occupy which the owners of the land choose to exact. To the engineering supplement the London T mee, Sir Berjamin B owne, who is chairman of the great ship building firm of R & W. Hawthorne, Leslie & Co., of Newossile-on-Type, contributes an interesting article on colonial arsenals and dockyards. The article is written from the view point that the colonies will, in coming to the assist ance of the British navy, prefer to own their own ships and likewise to ouild and repair them. This would dinance works. Sir Berjamin doelerge English firm and ask them to would destroy local initiative, and damage existing plants. Furthermore, if outsiders were invited in, it would mean that they would demand a monopoly and also a guarantee of employment. In other words, the advantage of competition would be lost. He would prefer a comt it in this way the local concern would secure the advantage of the British connection, which would supply them with that which they could not produce themselver, and enable them by gradual stages of actile that should prove a valuable lesson in matters of this kind sleep, and was tired all the time.
