'Thank you, sir, but I prefer sitting on the back seat with that gentleman, if he will let me,' said the most electrical voice that Wälter has listened too in some time. 'Certainly, miss,' said the delighted Bom-bavite: and when she scated herself by him she gazed into his face with such a queer kind of a mixed-up delight and astonishment that Walter actually took a look down upon himself to ascertain what there was about his person that appeared to be so pleasing to the fair maiden; but he discover-ed nothing unsual. The stage rolled on toward Derby at its usual rapid rate of five miles an hour, and Walter and the merry mail seemed as chatty and cosy together as though they had known each other for years instead of minutes.

The minister tried to engage the ringlets in conversation, but he soon found himself 'no where.' She had neither eyes nor cars for any body else but Walter; and he had told her more about his own travels and Bombay scenery, than he ever told any boly else before or since. At last they came to Derby. The borses that to be charged, and four fresh skeletons were harnessed up and tackled on the old stage. Walter handed that genile girl back to her old seat as gracefully as he could back to her old seat as gracefully as he could have done, had he never lived in Bombay, but 'always stopped in New York.
