The Lesson of the Disaster

To-day we publish a number of cuttings from the latest Canadian and American newspapers, which arrived by the S. S. Rosalind. Many of the incidents are most thrilling and not a few show that much manliness was shown in the midst of disaster. It would appear that the passengers only gradually came to realize the possibility of the Titanic sinking. Fitted with water tight compartments, equipped with wireless, to many of the passengers it appeared at first that there was greater danger in entering the boats than in remaining on the ship. Ashore and afloat, the impression prevailed among many as well as in the mind of Bruce Ismay that the Titanic was unsinkable. That confidence was misplaced and the misplaced confidence has cost heavily in human life. One of the results of over-confidence was the shortage in life-boats, which were apparently carried more in compliance with the Board of Trade requirement, rather than with the feeling of the necessity of carrying them. Moreover, the requirements of the Board of Trade are based on vessels up to 10,000 tons. In other words, the Board of Trade requires no more life saving apparatus on board a Titanic than on board the Teutonic. It would thus appear that this over-weening confidence had even affected those responsible for the enactment of life saving regulations. All these matters are abundantly evident from the stories of the disaster and from the admissions of Mr. Bruce Ismay. This it is which makes the American comment so bitter. The lesson of the disaster is therefore that in all strainers, no matter what may be done in the way of water tight compartments and wireless calls for aid, it is absolutely essential to provide sufficient lifeboats for every soul aboard and a proper manning, lighting and provisioning for such lifeboats.

The Bruce Passengers.

The s.s. Bruce, which left Sydney at 10:20 last night, arrived at Port aux Basques at 7 a.m. to-day, making the run over in 8 hours. She met the ice, which was very heavy, 30 miles off Low Point, and forced through it until she was within two miles of Channel. Her passengers were: John Wheeler, W. H. Halfyard, L. and Mrs. Hodder, Geo. Hodder, Miss S. Soper, Miss M. Vigners, Rev. A. A. Holmes, J. Edgecombe, F. W. Darden, S. S. Wilmore, W. E. Condon, W. D. Serougie, H. M. Morrison, L. O. Spracklin and S. J. Butler.

CAPTAINS CHANGE.—The Clyde this season will be commanded by Capt. Stephen Harbin, formerly her chief officer, and Mr. John Pitcher will take his place. Capt. Job Knee, formerly of the Clyde, will take command of the Solway.

Bankers Delayed

Passengers by the Prospero say that a great loss has been occasioned this season to the Fortune Bay banking fleet by the scarcity of herring bait. A fleet of between 50 and 60 vessels have been delayed at Belleoram and other places for nearly three weeks, and the fabulous price of $50 per dory load has been offered for the fish. Some 25 vessels got a part baiting and sailed to the Banks. The vessels have lost a trip of fish owing to this, as at this time last year they were in with fair catches from the Banks. Here is an object lesson as to the value of cold storage depots.

The Grey Nuns Use Zam-Buk.

Many of the leading institutions throughout Canada have now adopted Zam-Buk as a standard preparation without equal for skin diseases and injuries. From the St. Patrick's Asylum, Ottawa, comes the following:—"Gentlemen:—In the orphanage department of the Asylum, we have found Zam-Buk very good for healing cuts, sores, and skin injuries, and shall continue to use it for such.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) GREY NUNS."

Won't Ship.

Owing to the fact that labor in the city is fairly plentiful and good wages offered, seamen are now fighting shy of their ordinary vocation and shipmasters find it difficult to secure men. The wage offered is $21 per month and a bonus of $2. Capt. Benson of the Empire, which is now ready for sea, was looking for men to-day but found it very hard to secure them.

The Washington Enquiry
Special Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.
The House of Lords took its turn last night in questioning the Government on the subject of the senatorial inquiry at Washington into the Titanic disaster. Earl Stanhope remarked the inquiry seemed to have only two grounds of justification. The first was that the steamship company concerned was not altogether British but partly American. If that were so, it would create a very extraordinary situation, because it struck at the root position of the mercantile marine in time of war as to whether a vessel belonging to a neutral or belligerent power. Only other ground was based on the terrible loss of life. If that was given as the reason for the inquiry at Washington, it was not other nations whose citizens and passengers were on board the Titanic would be justified in holding similar inquiries. Earl Stanhope said he could imagine nothing more terrible to the survivors than attendance at a series of inquiries in different countries. What Stanhope feared was the danger of the precedent being set up. Should some other power with which Great Britain's relations were not so friendly attempt to detain British citizens under similar circumstances it might become serious.

The Mount Temple Stories.

Special to Evening Telegram.
ST. JOHN, To-day.
Captain Moore of the S. S. Mount Temple, has received orders from the Canadian Pacific Company to last night to go to Washington to clear himself from the States Senate Commission of stories of signals from Titanic being sent by the Mount Temple, which refused to down and are repeated by members of crew with greater persistence than ever. It is stated that Moore expressed the willingness to tell what they know if it costs them their job.

Why There Was Little News.

Special to Evening Telegram.
NEW YORK, To-day.
Marconi, Chairman of the Marconi Company, yesterday at the Senate Committee investigation on the Titanic disaster, said he authorized the wireless operators on the Carpathia and Titanic to sell their story of the great sea catastrophe for publication. Marconi explained in giving consent to the sale of these stories that he had not attempted in any way to suppress general information of the wreck. The inventor of wireless denied any knowledge whatever of wireless messages sent to operators, telling them to keep their mouths shut, hold out for four figures. These messages, one of them signed Marconi, were picked up by United States battleship Florida on the night of the Carpathia coming in, and forwarded to the Secretary of the Navy. Marconi declared he never authorized these messages but did give consent to operators to receive money.

(In Chambers, Before Mr. Justice Emerson).
Coveyduck vs. Coaker and the Union Publishing Co.
This is an application on the part of the plaintiff to strike out paragraph four of the defence on the ground that it is embarrassing and tends to prejudice and delay the fair trial of the action. Warren, K.C., for plaintiff; Kent, K.C., for defendants. After counsel had been heard in support of the application and against it, the judge reserved his decision.

Who Sent False Messages?

LONDON, April 17. — The London Standard prints to-day the following under the head: "A Mystery of the News—Who Sent the Wireless Falsehoods?"
"One of the mysteries in connection with the Titanic disaster, which at present is unsolved, is the extraordinary series of false messages with which the world was lulled into fancied security on Monday.
"For sixteen hours, until 1 o'clock yesterday morning, right through the editions of the evening papers and earlier editions of the mornings, a flood of alleged wireless messages was received. They reported that all the passengers had been saved; that the Titanic was proceeding upon her own steam to Halifax; that she could not possibly sink; that twenty boatloads of passengers had been transhipped to the Parisian and Carpathia were both in attendance; that the Virginian was towing the Titanic toward Cape Race to beach her; that all passengers had been taken off.
"And then the truth, when the dire news came that the Titanic had sunk at 2:30 a.m. This put the possibility of a greater disaster forward for the first time. News agencies and correspondents who sent false news merely transmitted information given out to them as received at various points.
"All praise is due them for their exceptional promptitude. But who sent these wireless messages? And why were they sent?
"The London Times says: "Stories about the ship heading for shore under her own steam, or being towed by other steamers, either to a harbor or shoal water, cannot possibly have come from the ships concerned. They must have been pure inventions—inventions of a cruel, heartless kind."

AN EXCITING Of a Collar Immense

An Old-Time Seasonal Experience Vanguard 37

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Will you please allow me space in your very extensively circulated paper for a few remarks which have been very forcibly brought to my mind through reading of the terrible disaster which has recently taken place so near our shores.
I can imagine and in some way describe the feelings experienced in sliding with an iceberg, as I have experienced through a similar experience.
This happened on the S. S. Vanguard, commanded by that magnificent type of the old Viking, Captain Arabin Manden, of Brigus, in 1876, on the way home from the fishery and bound to Harb Grace. The ice was then not far from shore and impenetrable, until
