Giving Things a Rest.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

To last as long as possible and remain in the most efficient state, human beings must have a certain amount of rest and change. That is a truism. But did it ever occur to you that inanimate objects also seem to profit by an occasional rest?

A few months ago, a clock which we had had a great many years, suddenly stopped in the middle of the week, and firmly resisted all efforts to start it. "It needs cleaning," we said, "we must send it to the clockmaker." We were very busy, however, and put off attending to this matter until last week. At that time we were about to call up the clockmaker and ask him to come for the recalcitrant timepiece, when someone suggested, "Let's try to start it once more before we send it away."

We did so and the clock started cheerfully off its duties of timekeeping without a murmur or a hitch. "All it needed you see, was a rest."

Everyone knows that boots and shoes will wear just about twice as long if they are not worn steadily, but given a chance to rest a day or two every now and then, and many people say the same about clothes.

At the end of last summer, the hat which I had worn all the season seemed absolutely impossible to me, and I bought my winter hat considerably earlier than I had intended to, because it did not seem to me that I could wear my faded and dilapidated summer hat even once more. But behold, when I took that hat out of the bandbox after a winter's rest, and it didn't look half bad, and I actually wore it a few times.

A woman who keeps two or three expensive plumes as permanent hat ornaments, declares that she is able to get a good deal more wear out of them, if she gives them a season's rest now and then. "If I used them steadily, every season they would only last three or four years," she says, "but by giving them a summer or a winter vacation now and then, I can keep them presentable for eight or nine years."

Perhaps someone will suggest in the case of the hat that the change was subjective rather than objective; in other words, that it was my eyes which profited by the rest rather than the hat. There may be something in that, but that hypothesis doesn't explain the clock, you know, nor the plumes, nor the shoes.

There have been philosophers who contended that there is a principle of life in every inanimate object. I can't quite go that far, but I do still insist that, however you explain it, in this one matter, inanimate objects are just like you and me—they sometimes need a rest.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Dickover.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. B. F. Dickover, of Utopia, Ohio. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and I was well. I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 50 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

Tips the Basis of Girl's Fortune

New York, June 6.—Traffic Patrolman Michael Dugan, of the Thirtieth street station, on duty at Fifth Ave. and Thirty-third street, by the Waldorf-Astoria, peeped for months through the hotel windows at Miss Rose Farrell, the girl at the hall stand. He at last succeeded in obtaining a formal introduction, made love to her, and last evening married her in St. Francis of Assisi Catholic Church.

Thereby the hotel lost a popular employee, who had been there twelve years. For the last eight years she checked hats. Last night, after the ceremony, she showed the bridegroom deeds to property on City Island estimated to be worth between $75,000 and $80,000, besides a bank book showing several thousands of dollars on deposit.

The basis of Miss Farrell's fortune came in tips. When she had $15,000 she invested in real estate. Values Neck and Back Broken, Yet She Lives.

New York, June 11.—Esther Harris, an eighteen year old girl, who was placed in a heap of the lifeless in the Triangle fire disaster, but who was taken to a hospital instead of to the morgue when a faint sign of life was detected and who suffered total paralysis for months afterwards, can walk again. The girl slid down the elevator cable when the shaft-panicked, but was knocked down from her hold by a man who jumped down the shaft, and she, too, was hurled to the basement, breaking her neck and back. After she had lain in a hospital un-

The National Convention.

BY H. L. RANN.

H. L. Rann.

The national convention is a quadrennial gathering of super-heated patriots who have no direct interest in anything save pure politics and the federal appointments. It is made up of delegates chosen by the people at great expense, and are loaded down with instructions so that they will stand hunched in one spot until death do us part. The national convention has three important duties to perform. It has to nominate a president who will not cause big business to throw a chill, hitch him up to a vice-president who is on good terms with our infant industries, and write a platform which will accommodate every body from a Holy Roller to the Anti-cigarette league. National conventions are always attended by a number of palpitating dark horses, who hope that the two leading candidates will adjourn sine die and allow somebody to be nominated who can be elected. Every once in a while some dark horse will throw a handful of hoarse delegates into the running gear and ball up the convention until the postmasters can't tell one bandwagon from another. The most successful dark horse in American history was the late General Garfield, who edged in with one delegate that he endeavored to strangle early in the proceedings and was finally roped and tied despite his struggles. The national convention is held in some building which will easily hold one-nineteenth of those who have tickets, and is the most remarkable gathering of cold storage eloquence and shirt sleeved enthusiasm in the known world. Every national convention has a temporary chairman who sounds the key-note, which reverberates throughout the country in the form of boiler plate for several weeks. Contested delegates to a national convention are embittered citizens who are not allowed to have any hand in saving the country, unless they are seated with a pickaxe. A national convention is not as bloody as a Mexican bull fight, but it lasts longer and is far more exciting. Nobody who is looking for a new brand of nervous thrills should miss it.

Will Recover.

The young man, Walter Petrie, who was seriously injured at the Reid Co.'s machine shops yesterday, spent a quiet and restful night at the General Hospital. Although severely wounded no bones were found to be broken. His head was crushed badly, but we learn this morning that his prompt recovery is hopeful and no complications to warrant grave apprehensions are likely to follow as was thought at first.

A NEW "CUSTOMER."—Yesterday afternoon a bullock after coming off Pitt's wharf, escaped from the owner and attempted to gain an entrance to Ayre & Sons shop. The visitor was refused admittance and later was escorted to the slaughter house.

Football Match.

Collegians Win Easily.
Under unfavourable weather conditions and before a small gathering of spectators the Collegian-B. I. S. football match was played on St. George's Field last evening. The former team won easily, having eight goals to their credit whilst their opponents did not reach the net once.

The B. I. S. won the toss and defended the western goal. Right at the outset they started a splendid rush confining the ball near the Collegians goal and the latter had all they could do to prevent the Irish lads from scoring; shooting was bad but this was easily understood owing to the heavy downpour of rain that prevailed making the ball wet and greasy. For about five minutes the B. I. S. kept up the attack but could not get beyond Ayre who is a hard man to beat. Soon after the Collegians forward line took a hand in and inside of fifteen minutes had three goals to their credit through Hutchings, Pike and Aitken. During the remainder of this half Hutchings repeated the trick three times, and when the half-time whistle sounded the score was—Collegians, 6 goals; B. I. S., 0.

Second Half.

On resumption the Collegian players constantly were in control of the ball. They played all round the B. I. S. boys and the game was anything but interesting to the spectators. Clinton was called upon to save scores of shots which he did in capital style. It was generally admitted that he gave one of the best exhibitions of goal tending ever witnessed on St. George's Field. During the balance of the game the Collegians notched up two more goals and the score stood 8 goals to 0.

Useful Men.

The useful men are doing some tasks both sane and good; they're plowing or they're hewing or sawingicks of wood. They make two blades of lettuce grow where one grew before; they do not bore or fret us with an internal roar. Ah, when I contemplate them, my eye in moisture swims. Why don't you emulate them, you timesome Windy Jims? I get so tired of speaking of verbal catarracts, of statements who are reeking with Arguments and Facts; of politicians yellow who toot the brazen horn; I most admire the fellow who calmly plows his corn! The men who rant and thunder across the jagged land, and tear the air asunder with noise that beats the band, contribute nothing, nothing, to help the race to win, and idle are the frothing, the whooping and the din. The man who puts a collar upon his spavined bay and earns a sweaty dollar for toiling through the day to me is more enchanting than all the gifted boys who spend the summer ranting and kicking up a noise. The useful men are hoeing, performing kindred deeds; they're out where things are growing, a-pulling up the weeds; the weeds—they amputate them, destroy them roots and limbs; why don't you emulate them, you cheap old Windy Jims?
