ALLIED PROSPECTS NEVER BRIGHTER.

LONDON, To-day. The opening of the present week finds the prospects of the Allies perhaps brighter than at any previous period of the war, according to the view held here, and the position held by the Central Powers is more discouraging. General Brusilov's striking victories present the German General Staff with the problem of how to reinforce the eastern front, since General Von Linsingen, who was sent by the Germans to the aid of the shattered Austrians, has now been completely thrust back from the Lutsa salient; but the same problem is presented on the western front where, says an unofficial correspondent, the ceaseless battle seems steadily to gain in intensity. Doubtless the constant arrival of fresh German troops and guns, he adds, has everything to do with this result. The enemy shows an increasing tendency to counter attacks. These counter attacks have failed to stem the steady Allied advance, although at the present moment the fighting in the Somme is mainly devoted to securing the mastery of small strategic positions, which will be keys to further progress. There is yet no sign of the Germans making any effective counter offensive. The Russians' remarkable victories reveal a most interesting situation. The army of the German General Count Von Bothmer, holding the Sripa near Lemberg on the Tarnopol railroad was a few weeks ago being outflanked. General Letichitsky's passing further enabled Von Bothmer to hold out the threatened positions. General Sakharoff then devoted himself to enveloping Von Bothmer's forces in the north with what success is seen in his double victory west of Lutsa and Brody. Thus outflanked, north and south, it is considered impossible that Von Bothmer can longer delay extricating himself from his precarious position, even if he can do so without serious losses. The Russians at Brody are at present nearer Lemberg than Von Bothmer's forces, which are estimated with Lemberg's defences. Although the country between Brody and Lemberg is very difficult, it becomes a question whether the evacuation of both Korol and Lemberg will not soon become necessary.

THE MUNITIONS EXPLOSION.

NEW YORK, To-day. A statement issued to-night by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., says that a 13 brick storage warehouse, owned and operated by the National Storage Co., and six pieces owned by the Storage Co., and leased to the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., were destroyed, and several other brick warehouses badly damaged. Some minor damage was done to the Lehigh Valley grain elevators, and in addition, as far as is known, 85 loaded cars were destroyed. According to evidence obtained by officials of the company, the fire started at 1.05 this morning in a barn belonging to the Independent Towing Co., which was moored alongside the Railroad Co.'s dock expressly against the evacuation of both Korol and Lemberg will not soon become necessary.

"No Man's Land."

No Man's Land is an eerie sight. An early dawn in the pale gray light. Never a house and never a hedge. In No Man's Land from edge to edge. And never a living soul walks there. To taste the fresh of the morning air. Only some lumps of rotting clay. That were friends or foemen yesterday.

What are the bounds of No Man's Land? You can see them clearly on either hand.

A mound of rag-bags gray in the sun. Or a furrow of brown where the earthworks run.

From the eastern hills to the western sea. Through field or forest, o'er river and lea;

No man may pass them, but aim you well. And Death rides across on the bullet or shell.

But No Man's Land is a goblin sight. When patrols crawl over at dead of night;

Boche or British, Belgian or French. You'll die with death when you cross the trench.

When the "rapid," like fire-flies in the dark. Flits down the parapet spark by spark.

And you drop for cover to keep your head. With your face on the breast of the dead.

The man who ranges in No Man's Land. Is dogged by the shadows on either hand.

When the star-shell's flare, as it bursts overhead. Scars the great gray rats that feed on the dead.

And the bursting bomb or the bayonet-slash. May answer the click of your safety-catch.

For the lone patrol, with his life in his hand. Is hunting for blood in No Man's Land.

—J. Knight Adkin, in the Spectator.

pellin was nowhere to be seen when the pilot regained consciousness; he was then forced to return to his situation.

Wedding Bells.

At Catalina, on Thursday, Mr. Jas. H. Harvey, of Messrs. Ayre & Sons, Ltd., office staff, was wedded to Miss Gladys M. House, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Ronald House, of Catalina. The marriage was held in St. Peter's Church and Rev. G. S. Chamberlain officiated in the presence of a large congregation and St. John's friends who went for the purpose. The bride was handsomely attired in white silk and veil and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The pretty sister of the bride, Miss Nellie House, acted as bridesmaid costumed in white voile carrying pink carnations, whilst the maid of honor was little Charlotte Green, niece of the groom whose bouquet was sweet peas and pink carnations. Mrs. Edward Stone very kindly volunteered her services as organist and whose music was greatly appreciated by those present. The bride was given away by her father Capt. Ronald House and a reception was held at the bride's home after the knot was tied. The gifts were many and included a magnificent case of cutlery from Messrs. Ayre & Sons Ltd., where both bride and groom were formerly employed. The wedding trip was taken to the up-to-date Oakley Hotel at Port Blandford, and thence to Bishop Falls. The happy couple will return to their new home in a fortnight situated on Glover St. East, near Cochrane Street. The Telegram extends felicitations.
