Big Cattle. One English Ox, History Shows, Weighed 3,700 Pounds, Another 4,840 Pounds.

Some Old-Time

With all the modern improvement doubted whether there is living today a steer or ox equal in size to some of the fat cattle of olden times. In 1845 there was disposed of by raffle at Pratt's Old London inn, in Taunton, England, a giant ox of the Devon breed that stood 19 hands high and weighed 3,700 pounds. But this one was not in it with the Durham ox which earned a modest fortune for its owner, John Day, and brought the now famous Shorthorn cattle into high repute a little more than a century ago. A writer in the Mark Lane Express described the extraordinary animal as having weighed when two years old 3,520 pounds, and when slaughtered at eight years old his carcass dressed 2,478 pounds, while his live weight at that time was stated to have been 4,340 pounds. He girthed 11 feet 1 inch just behind the shoulders. His owner exhibited him six years through England and Scotland, having a van for his conveyance about the country. It was in 1807 that Day's ox dislocated his hip and had to be killled.

Favorite, the sire of this bovine wonder, was made famous by the prodigious size and remarkably fine form of the steer. When Charles Colling of Darlington, who is regarded as the founder of the Shorthorn breed, sold all his cattle at auction in 1810, Comet, a six-year-old bull by Favorite, brought $5,000, and six cows by him, some of them eleven years old, made an average of $720, which was unheard of in those days and for many years afterward.

A Good Night's Rest.

"How many hours do you sleep?" The question was put to me recently, and I answered: "About seven, off and on. I manage four hours, then I lie awake for one or two, and drop off again, feeling sleepiest when I should arise." That, I suppose, means that I am not sleeping healthily. But I cannot help it. The more one strives to coax slumber, the farther away it seems to me. He has, in a sense, make me

How many hours per night do you sleep? And are you satisfied that on wakening you are always completely

The old tag-"Six hours' sleep for a man, seven for a woman, eight for a fool"-has been the bane of my existence for years. I have always tried to persuade myself that I must be very foolish, because the more sleep I can get the better I am pleased.

One man known to me gives appreciative backing to this standpoint, for he says: "I must be a very real fool, for I sleep nine hours solid out of every twenty-four." What is the minimum necessary for purposes of health? One reads about distinguished politicians and authors and inventors who make do with four hours' sleep per night. Are they superhuman physically as well as mentally, or is there some enviable peculiarity in their make-un? "Nice to Get up in the Morning, But-" Is the whole thing a matter of personal habit or constitution, or should one be forced to rest in bed, even if unconsciousness cannot be attained, for a certain number of hours out of every day?

A novelist friend of mine who is one of the hardest-working and, at the same time, one of the healthiest men I know, confessed to me recently that he seldom went to bed before two, and always rose about seven a.m. It would be an exaggeration to say that I was amazed, but certainly I was surprised. Also, I was uneasy. I couldn't help feeling that, compared with him, I was a woeful slug-a-hed Happily for my peace of mind, I learned later that, though he spent only some five hours in his bed, it was his pleasant habit to snooze in an armchair for at least one hour every day after lunch. So far as one can judge, the hours of sleep required by each individual are peculiar to that individual. Yet certain sections of the community have, willynilly, to ration themselves as to their periods of dreamless of nightmarish insensibility.

Sailors, for instance, learn very soon that four hours at a time is their customary ration, though, thanks to the dor-watch, they get automatically eight hours off after the shorter
