Then began one of the greatest man hunts in the history of Chicago, bacause of the evident brutality of the murderers and the prominence of the Franks family. More than a score of persons, including two instructors t the Harvard school, were arrested, but released when they were able to disprove connection with the kidnapping and murder.

Seated, he was struck upon the head with a taped cold chisel, and kidnappers, not realizing that the boy was dead, drove about for a time intending to kill the child when they reached the place they had selected for disposing of the body. They finally reached the rendezvous, stripped acid on his face with the intention of disfiguring it beyond recognition. Leopold donned wading boots, strode into the water and thrust the body stuck and he forced it further with his foot, but in the haste in the darkness left the murdered boy's feet protruding. The defense based its plea for penitentiary sentence rather than deata on the gallows on a finding of a degree of "mental sickness," short of insanity, however, in both youths, attributing it to functional disorders of the endocrine glands, childish phantasies continuing into the maturer years as malign influences, and stunted emotional growths. The state lought to prove that the youths were ntirely responsible, mentally, emotionally and physically. Both the Leopold and Loeb families disclaimed any intention to use their enormous wealth to cheat the law and were agreed that the boys were menaces to society and should be confined, although they desired for them the same defense permitted any other lawbreaker in an effort to save their lives.

It was brought out on the witness stand that the four alienists were to receive a fee of $250 a day. The attorneys' fees would be stipulated by a committee composed of the officers of the bar association of Chicago.

The participation of the Franks family in the hearing was not elaborated upon. Two of the alienists for the prosecution, one of whom testified his fee was to be $250 a day, said they had been engaged for the state through Samuel Ettelson, former our Sole Makers:
