A very calamitous and tragic occurrence almost tock: place here the other day at the Queen's Hotel, where a bridal couple had arrived to spend a portion of their honeymoon. The bridegroom must apparently have been unaware of the requirements of gas, for instead of turning at off he merely blew it out, and the consequence was an escape of gas through the night that almost proved fatal to the youthful pair. Not making their appearance at a late hour in the morning, after repeated kneckings, suspicions were aroused, the door was broken in, and the immates were found of the most palid hue, and on the verge of insensibility. Fortunately a little fresh air proved a reviver, and let us hope that the young man from the country will, on the next occasion, understand somewhat better how to turn off the gas.

Abdication of the Spanish

Abdication of the Spanish Throne.

The Carlist insurrectionary movement in Spain has increased so rapidly, and the extent of their operations become so alarming, as to occasion the gravest apprehension. The weather has been very stormy recently, and snow storms so prevalent that the royal troops have been powerless to suppress the rebels.

In addition to this a new trouble has arisen, and the king has abdicated the throne. It would appear that his Majesty had a disagreement with his Ministry, which caused an estrangement and considerable illifeding. In November last the General of the Artillery, Don Hidalgo, was promoted to the Captain Generalship of the Basque Provinces, whereupon the majority of the officers of that branch of the service resigned their commission, protesting against the promotion as irregular and unjustifiable, and refusing to serve under the newly-appointed Captain-General, because he participated in the massacre at Saugil Barracks in 1866. Finding his new position so uncomfortable, Don flidalgo resigned, and the officers renewed their resignations and entered a protest. The Ministry disregarded them, and, appealing to the Cortes, obtained a unanimous vote of confidence. King Amadeus, who disapproved of the appointment of the objectionable character in the first instance, feels the insult, and has abdicated the throne. The view is considered gloomy, and a bitter civil war, it is thought, is inevitable. is considered gloomy, and a bitter vivil war, it is thought, is inevitable. The streets of Madrid are filled with crowds of excited people. The Cortes have already adopted a Republican form of Government, by a vote of 259 against 32. Further rews from Spain will be looked for with interest.
