Heart Department

A great city is like a huge spider's web. To the young and unsophisti-cated girl there are so many ways of becoming entangled in the web that every safeguard should be put around as a protection to her. It is more piti-ful when the girl is poor and is searching for employment. What more nat-ural than for her to spend one of her last remaining pennies for a newspaper to scan eagerly the advertisements? Long and eagerly these girls pore over the list, selecting thos most promising

It is the careful wording of the ad ertisements which lures them. There is no danger signal to warn them to take care—"beware!" Many a girl goes blindly on to her undoing. is not to be supposed, by any means, that all men who advertise for help are wolves in sheep's clothing, or that they have sinister designs. one false advertiser among the thousand of good and reliable ones who be feared. These always set forth that they will give the most pay, and for the least work. Girlish human nature is wont to look with favor upon such conditions. Not one young wo man out of a hundred thinks of leav ing word anywhere as to the street and number which they intend visit ing in search of work. Nor do they resitate upon finding the place in an isolated neighborhood. The experience of such young girls, could the world but know, would furnish the most tragic stories ever written The following letter has just been received from a dear old mother Dear Miss Libbey: It is a heart roken woman now writing you, bu ny grief is of long standing. I had daughter, young, and as good as she

"Dear Miss Libbey. I am 26 and have known a young girl for the last six years, during which time I have enjoyed her company more or less, but am now of the opinion that on her part there is more than friendship. "Am I to blame when I have been very frank with her and told her more than once that the only reason I desired her company was because she is a girl that anyone of my disposition unless he has serious intentions, and these I never have had, on account of my circumstances at home. In con clusion I hope that I have made my position clear to you, and can assur you that myself as well as z good many others in the same position as am will appreciate your answer.

Can a Man Love Twice? "Dear Miss Libbey: A widower with several children has asked to keep my company. He often has told me that he loved his wife and he did anything she wished him to. I am a young single girl, and I always thought when I married I must be the only girl my husband ever loved. "Do you think a man could love his second wife as well as he did his first, or that he only wants to get marrie again so his children and he will have a home and a housekeeper? Do you think it right for me to accept his DOUBTFUL company or not. Undoubtedly a man can love his second wife just as well and sometimes better than his first wife. Don't accept his company unless you care for him. Personally I think a young girl marrying a man with several children s assuming a great responsibility However, if you really love the may this will not make any difference

S. B. Ramsay THE DECORATOR,

I have come to the conclusion that automobiling has a tendency to coarshave to take the machine necessitates speaking hansd above the head. You do you can put your hands in such a posi-tion that the return flow through the of the machine necessitates speaking in a higher tone than the natural one, if women will talk while the machine is moving fast.

It is too bad that shrill, unpleasant tones should take the place of mild, soft, feminine tones in speaking. For the American voice is severely criticised all over the world. Gladstone said: "All time and money spent in training the voice and the body is an investment that pay's larger interest than any other."

training the voice and the body is an investment that pays larger interest than any other."

Judging by the nasal quality of the majority of women's voices one would imagine that most women suffered from catarrh. They either use the high penetrating, unculitwated tone to be conspicuous or they think people are deaf.

Nothing is more of an indication of refinement than a low, gentle speaking voice. It is as refreshing as it is rare to hear a number of women conversing in quiet tones. Just notice a motoring party of women arriving at a restaurant for luncheon or dinner and you will understand what I mean. There are women who talk on one key and never vary the monotony of tone. Those women cannot possibly hear their own voices or they would surely correct them.

Then there are some women whose voices are so musical that just a sentence from their lips is joyful to listen to. How such women stand out above the ordinary women.

Ada Rehan had, to my thinking, the most delicate and musical voice of any woman who ever graced the American stage. It was always a rest to the nerves to see one of her performances and hear her perfectly modulated voice. Bernhardt has that wonderful quality in her voice that is always young and soft. Such voices are cultivated and such cultivation should be part of the education of every American gfrl.

To be sure, if mothers speak with a shrill, uncultivated voice, children will imitate them. It is never too late to cultivate a speaking voice and a low soft tone is not an indication of age but of culture.

Some women whine through life, but I always imagine they have been invalids when young and their parents have been too lenient with them to correct them. There is no excuse for the shrill, high tempered voices which is side develops the muscles. After the shrill, high tempered voices which is always imagine motor.
