London, Tuesday Nov. 18. Two Policies Before the Country. Sir John Macdonald's biographer says that he (Sir John) "believed that a mutually preferential commercial arrangement between England and Canada, under which a small duty should be levied upon foreign corn coming into the United Kingdom, and a similar advantage accorded to British manufactures by Canada, would not raise the price of food in England and would result in a large and permanent development of trade, both to the mother country and the colony." Sir John might have been incredulous had he been told that within a few Years his own party would array itself against this policy. At that time the prospect of a revival of the import tax on corn in Great Britain was considered very remote, and imperial preferential trade had only a speculative tion of practical politics, and there is an almost positive assurance that the colonies can obtain favored treatment in the British market if they offer sufficient inducements. This condition of things has been hastened by Canada's preferential policy and by Laurier, who refused to antagonize that the British people tax themselves in return for Canadian favors. The Conservative party of this country, the self-styled "British" party, the there was little chance of getting it), is now swallowing its professions and relations. The pretensions of the Contive party demands that the favors already granted the mother country be withdrawn. These are two distinct policies and they create a new situa-

Thousands of boys all over Canada and the United States, together with not a few children of larger growth, will feel that they have sustained a personal bereavement in the death of George A. Henty, war correspondent and author of books for boys, who died on Sunday on his yacht at Welmouth, England. Mr. Henty's stories have been to the lads of the present generation what those of Ballantyne and Kingston were to the boys who are now concerned with the larger affairs that make up the duties and responsibilities of man's estate. For the seventy or more boys' stories that Mr. Henty wrote, he chose a wide variety of historical settings, ranging from the days of the ancient kingdoms of the earth down to the opening of the twentieth century. Despite the diversity of locality, his books are identical in one work, of which there will be plenty respect, and that is in presenting as at the ensuing session. the central figure a manly, courageous and high-minded youth, who cannot fail to win the admiration of the boy who peruses the story. Mr. Henty's cause the portfolio of public works has books thus have a twofold value in teaching boys the history, customs and manners of bygone ages in an attract-Ive form, and in inculcating in them high ideals of manliness and Christian courage. It would be well for the future of the youth of the country if such books as Mr. Henty's were placed in their hands as a substitute for the trashy detective and criminal stories upon which so many waste their time and their intelligence. It is to be hoped for the sake of the boys themselves, that the vogue if Mr. Henty's stories will not die out for years to come.

Looking to Canada.

"The only country we can look to for the timber we must have is Canada,' says the English publication, Engineering. The mines, the railways, the telegraph-all these require enormous quantities of timber, which Great Britain yearly imports. In 1901 the number of loads of pit-props imported for use in the mines was 1,879,810. There are in use in Great Britain ninety million railroad ties, and the annual conoumption for renewals is about 3,750,000 wear. Engineering estimates the value of timber used on British railways every year at £1,250,000, exclustve of what is needed for rolling stock. In Great Britain there is less area under forest than in any other country ander Europe except Portugal. There are only five European countries which export timber-Russia, Sweden, Austria-Hungary, Norway and Roumaniaand the amount exported by these five countries is nearly 2,750,000 tons short of the total amount required in Europe Germany, with 26 per cent. of its area under forest, admirably managed on scientific principles, imports nearly half as much as Great Britain. France, with him a couple of lady friends, he half as much as Great Britain. France, with 18 per cent of its area under forest, and that scientifically managed, as in Germany, imports 1,250,000 tons of timber a year. Belgium, with 17 per cent under forest, imports still more largely in value though somewhat less in weight. Denmark, Italy, Spain and Holland all import. Of the timber "Yes, but one of the mummies died "Yes, but one of the mummies THE LONDON ADVERTISER COMimported into Great Britain in 1899, more than nine-tenths in weight and bury him." nearly four-fifths in value was coniferous wood, which is grown in the temperate countries of the northern hemisphere, and this is the timber which is most largely consumed in engineering work. Hence the conclusion that the mother country must look to Canada. Engineering says: "Canada is said to have still 38 per "Canada is said to have still 38 per cent of its area forest—that is, nearly 800,000,000 acres—but much of what 's That fashion could hardly impair. called forest is not timber-producing. The United States is making increasing demands on Canada for timber; and Canada itself, with its enormous resources in water power, will soon be a large consumer of its own forest produce. The one industry of wood paper pulp will alone consume an immense area of forest. There are wood pulp companies now holding 250,000 and 300,000 acres of forest, and one—the Lake Superior Power Com-pany, has obtained an immense area (8,000,000 acres, it is said), of spruce forest to supply its water power mills with material for making wood

Even the Dutch are disposed to purchase from the colonials whenever possible. Somehow they have a sincere respect for the courage and physique of our colonial contingents. The Australians are securing large orders for cheap and light agriculturalmachinery. Some of these have been placed with them by the Government. Mr. Jardine thinks Canadians could have a show if they made an effort. Johannesburg will spend in the next few years upwards of $20,000,000 upon drainage, waterworks, electric tramways, and new buildings. Durban, Pretoria, Pietermaritzburg, Port Elizabeth, Kimberley and Cape Town will undertake similar large works, and the Government railways will need rolling stock, locomotives, etc. The corpora-tions are favorably disposed toward Canadian goods, and our manufacwhich only a rich woman can afford to indulge in. Nervousness has cost many a woman her position. Sometimes when women run machinery the price of nervousness is mutilation,-a finger lost or perhaps the whole hand crushed. Nervousness in women is commonly but a symptom of womanly disease. It is useless in such cases to "doctor" for the nerves alone.

Cure the diseases which attack the delicate womanly organism and nervousness will be cured also.

"In the fall of 1897, I was troubled with nervousness, headache, heart trouble and female weakness," writes Miss Illauch M. Bracey, of Sala, Oswego Co., N. Y. "Last summer I wrote you and you advised me to try your 'Pavorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I did so and I began to improve rapidly. Continued taking the medicine, half a dozen each of 'Pavorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' for the space of five months, and in less than a year had regained my former health."

Mr. Jardine thinks that Canadian business men would do well to ap-point agents at all the important centers, handling our goods alone. Industries could unite for this purpose. If Canadian trade in Africa is to grow, the number of agents, with push and energy must be increased. So far we have only three altogether.

A NEW MELODRAMA. "The Scout's Revenge" will have its first production in this city at the Grand next Friday evening. It is the work of John A.
