"Probably one third of the population of Nova Scotia five around the coast. For a quarter of a century this great portion of our population to the south. Now that great wish has been satisfied and hope is filling the heart of everyone who follows the sea for a fivelihood. I do not wish to be over emphatic here to might, but I will say this. I believe no man today can foresee what a free market for fish will bring to the population of our sea coast.

"I see no reason today why the shaing fleet of Nova Scotia should not increase threefold. I see no reason why we should not become the principal fish producers of this continent. And yet there are men in this province who expect the honest toiler of the deep to listen to some betudded arguments about endangering the British flag or injuring railroads that run east and west. They would even ask him to becomirch his sacred ballotly condemning a policy which ment to him and to the generations to follow him. Does anybody say that because the Nova Scotia isherman sells his fish to an American at a texter price that his losalty is being impusned."
