Mrs. Charles Hood sued the Standar assurance company for $4000, the amount assurance company for $4000, the amount of two insurance policies on mills in Muskoka belonging to her, which were destroyed by fire. This ended the jury list, and the jurors were discharged. words: the former is local, the latter universal. It is, however, scarcely fair to compare the two cities; the position of Toronto and many other things are against her, while Montreal has everything in her favor. Yet it may be asserted with almost a certainty that if the queen city keeps increasing in wealth and commercial prosperity as she has in the past she will, in a comparative short time, outstrip her former rival. Between the business men of the two cities there is also a strong contrast. The Toronto merchant, after he has made a sufficient fortune, retires, and spends the remainder of his life in looking after what he has acquired. The Montreal merchant, on the other hand, very seldom indeed leaves active work until compelled either by sickness or old age. It becomes, in fact, as age advances, the one pleasure of life.
