Showing the great feature of “Baxter’s Patent Automatic Doors,” opened and exposing the device for operating the same.

These doors are made in two horizontal sections, the upper one hinged at top the lower at bottom.

oo

By a slight lift on the handle, the two doors, being exactly balanced, swing open, the lower one stopping when precisely level with the bottom of the oven, forming a solid, wide and substantial shelf.
 The operating device is very simple, and is all outside, where it may be easily taken apart and in no way interfere with the oven.
 The enterprising dealer will at once see the grand “Selling Feature” of this invention.
