CANADIAN COLORS PREFERRED

Amongst a few (fortunately a very few) people in this country it is the fashion to imagine that anything which comes from abroad and has been muddled with a duty must be better than what can be made and obtained at home. "Search the world for brains, but, preferably, use the home product" should be the cry for those who wish to build up the country.

In decorating the most palatial building in Canada and, possibly, the finest banking house in the world, viz., the new Bank of Montreal in Montreal, no expense was spared to get the finest paints that artistic intelligence and money could procure.

The ceiling and general "motif" is a triumph of the decorator's art, a creamy white, light blue and dull gold, blending in a delightful phantasy of color and form.

The paints were manufactured by the Canada Paint Company, Limited, of Montreal and Toronto, and comprise their regular stock. For strength and fineness it is emphatically asserted there are no better colors manufactured anywhere.
