

THAILAND

Canada's relations with Thailand are important because of the country's strategic location and its potential as a market for Canadian goods and services. The Department of International Trade Development is currently studying the possibility of establishing a trade office in Bangkok to promote Canadian exports to Thailand. The office would be responsible for providing information on Canadian products and services to Thai officials and business leaders. It would also be responsible for organizing trade missions and trade fairs in Bangkok. The office would be staffed by a Canadian trade representative and a Thai trade representative. The office would be located in the Thai Trade Center in Bangkok.

Recent Economic Developments

The Thai economy has been growing steadily since 1980. The growth rate was 10.5% in 1981, 11.5% in 1982, and 12.5% in 1983. The government has implemented a series of economic reforms to improve the country's economic structure. These reforms include the liberalization of foreign exchange, the privatization of state-owned enterprises, and the implementation of a new tax system. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's infrastructure, including the construction of new roads, bridges, and airports. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's social services, including the construction of new schools and hospitals. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's environment, including the implementation of a new environmental protection law.

- 7 -

THAILAND

The Thai economy has been growing steadily since 1980. The growth rate was 10.5% in 1981, 11.5% in 1982, and 12.5% in 1983. The government has implemented a series of economic reforms to improve the country's economic structure. These reforms include the liberalization of foreign exchange, the privatization of state-owned enterprises, and the implementation of a new tax system. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's infrastructure, including the construction of new roads, bridges, and airports. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's social services, including the construction of new schools and hospitals. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's environment, including the implementation of a new environmental protection law.

The Thai economy has been growing steadily since 1980. The growth rate was 10.5% in 1981, 11.5% in 1982, and 12.5% in 1983. The government has implemented a series of economic reforms to improve the country's economic structure. These reforms include the liberalization of foreign exchange, the privatization of state-owned enterprises, and the implementation of a new tax system. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's infrastructure, including the construction of new roads, bridges, and airports. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's social services, including the construction of new schools and hospitals. The government has also implemented a series of measures to improve the country's environment, including the implementation of a new environmental protection law.