

COPY.

May 28th, 1931.

Dr. A. L. Walsh,
Faculty of Dentistry,
McGill University,
City.

Dear Doctor Walsh;

I am informed by your communication of May 26th, of a "Brushing up course in Prosthetic Dentistry" to be held in July.

On two different occasions I have drawn your attention to the fact that in the minute books there is a motion duly proposed, seconded and carried that no Post-Graduate courses be held by the Faculty of Dentistry until such times as we are offering a much better course to the undergraduate body than we have been able to do, or are doing at present.

I cannot review the conditions of the Faculty and say that we are any better equipped or manned now or even as well, as we were when this resolution was placed on the books. You may call these courses by what names you choose but as far as the true meaning is concerned, they are Post-Graduate.

Just why is not the programme as laid down in the minutes of the meetings carried out? Why have these meetings lasting until midnight, if the conclusions arrived at are to