NURSERY

CONDUCTED BY Elinor Murray The Girl at Home.

The mother of the new baby puts in many happy hours planning great things for the little one. The boy baby is to be a wonder. A somebody who, by his stupendous wisdom and great works, is to be known the land over. And somehow the mother takes it for granted that the boy is to leave her in order to accomplish these things. He is hers temporarily, that she may prepare him for his greatness, but in the end he outgrows the home. But the girl baby! Here's a difference. She can be brought up to be so charming that everyone will love her as her mother does. And she will always stay at home, or, at least, always come home as mother's aid and companion. And even if she eventually leaves for her own home, she will be only an enlargement of mother's self, so to speak. When the girl does grow to the awkward age, how far away do those dreams seem! No amount of maternal modeling seems to hold her in the maternal mold. She is blind to the things mother expects to see, and alert to those she hopes may see. Often she walks with her head thrust forward, sits her knees apart, talks to herself or to some imaginary person, and is so self-absorbed that she ignores those it is desirable that she meet. Mothers quarrel with much in their daughters which is only natural, and which will speedily be outgrown. But we wish them to be so wonderfully nice, so much better and brighter than we were, or than our friends' daughters are—that we try to root out every trait that seems to us short of perfection.

And so we criticize her walk, her talk, her manner, her thoughts, and scold the girl until she becomes self-conscious and cross and cries out to be left alone. And that is what the girl needs, just to be left alone to work out her own life after her own ideas. And she can do it. When her character is framed and she has "settled down," the mother will find that the groundwork instilled into the life of the little girl has resulted in the growth the mother hoped for. But over-cultivation at the time when the girl is crying out for self-expression is tiring and worrying to mother and daughter. Let her alone! And if the wage-earning fever seizes her, as it does nearly all girls, let her try that, too. When her money is necessary to help support the home, she will find her work ennobling, or if she works just to earn money to buy things with, she will come back to the home-making idea enriched in experience, and with better business ideas in home management.

The mother cannot live the daughter's life, cannot make of the daughter exactly what she will, but she will probably get a great deal of satisfaction out of watching her train a little granddaughter in all the filial duties and crafts.

With a Central Door. According to The Electrician a certain number of cars on the Great Northern, Pictouville and Brompton Tube have been fitted with a central door opening under the control of the conductor from his platform and can be either bolted or unbolted by merely pressing a small lever. Each door is connected with electric lights on the conductor's platform and in the driver's cab, which light or go out, according as the doors are bolted or unbolted. The train is therefore started into the light by the driver's safe assurance that all the doors are closed. In the event of the Pictouville Tube adopting the system for all its trains, other tube companies amalgamated with it would follow suit.

Vegetable History

NEBUCHADNEZZAR was doubtless the first food reformer with the courage of his convictions. Like all progressives he endured much criticism. His diet of "grass" was probably crisp spinach, tender dandelion leaves and fresh lettuce, for all these were favorites with the ancients who were successful gardeners. We are too apt to take it for granted that vegetables grow everywhere and always have. Even Solomon said, "There is nothing new under the sun," but market gardening is a fine art that has interested all nations. Hebrew records tell of radishes so large that a fox could make its burrow in one, and of asparagus tips that weighed a pound each. A kitchen garden in early days was worthy of the named friendly vegetables is interesting, and after learning how great efforts have been made to grow and import foods that are now so plentiful, the cook takes greater pains to serve them at their best.

It is told that the English brought peas from Italy in the 13th century, and that they flourished and were well liked. Queen Elizabeth imported them from Holland and wrote that "they should be fit food for royal ladies, as they came so far and cost so dear."

The Maiden Queen seems to have had peculiar ideas regarding vegetables at all times. Lord Leicester brought her carrots from Flanders. Their plummy foliage was worn by Elizabeth and her court ladies for hair ornaments, but the roots were used only for stock. It is a pity she did not learn of their cosmetic value.

Sir Walter heard the news of Leicester's gift in far-off Virginia and in some way secured a few potatoes from an Indian. He sent them to Elizabeth, saying, "These knobs, held together by strings, may be boiled and eaten with sweet cream and are fit food for our lady."

That potatoes grew in Virginia at this time was a little fairy story, for they could be had only in Mexico for many years after Virginia was settled. The sweet potato was a delicate dish in England and Raleigh's settlers introduced it into the new land, where it was cooked and used in every conceivable way. The tender shoots were used for greens and the vegetable itself was mixed with Indian meal in puddings.

Articles that reached England before our modern old friend, the potato, crossed the Atlantic. It is wholesome and nutritious, but not dry and rich like the potato.

Cabbages, like onions, are reminiscent vegetables. The Egyptians made a god of each. But they were given to defying strange objects, so that was not a compliment.

There is no land where the onion is not used to flavor food. The Crusaders brought it to England. St. David carried it into Scotland, and there King James invented the famous dish of Cock-a-leekie so dear to Scotch palates. The Spanish have never cooked without onions and garlic.

Most vegetables now grow in America with little trouble. Their natural salts are indispensable to the family's good health, and two or more kinds should flank every dish of meat. More good judgment is required for vegetable cookery than in almost any other branch of the cuisine. The simple dressing of butter, salt and pepper is conceded to be the finest for the majority of vegetables.

CANADA'S GREATEST AUTOMOBILE SHOW WILL BE OPENED TOMORROW NIGHT

THE BOSTON LADIES' ORCHESTRA, WHICH WILL PLAY AT THE AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

With nearly a hundred workers hurrying from wing to wing, electricians crying their orders from cross beams to floor, architects directing gangs of helpers in the handling of massive decorations—such was the preparation for the Motor Show's opening tomorrow evening.

The busy moments of the past two days are not, however, indicative of confusion or abnormal haste, for the many weeks of preparation have been ample for the leisurely completion of every plan. Yesterday saw the "assembling" of scenic pieces, the last touches to the wiring and lights, the laying of thousands of yards of crimson carpet and the arrangement of the floral and palm displays. Casual visitors in the buildings admitted that nothing quite so extensive or ingeniously arranged has been prepared for Toronto eyes before.

Two distinct "features" are associated with this year's Motor Show. One is the ornamentation which finds its climax in a lofty structure, pedestal in form, resembling a great hillock of grass, apple trees in blossom, and even with living birds singing their songs. On one of its sides is a waterfall from which a refreshing stream plays over mounds of rock and passes finally under a rustic bridge to a deep pool. The Boston Ladies' Imperial Orchestra, an organization widely known in the United States, is a novelty of particular interest. They will be placed on the platform surmounting the pedestal and fountain. Electrically the show realizes the ingenious schemes made for it. Clusters, chandeliers and garlands of tiny lights are happy incidents of the interior, while a large British flag and coat-of-arms in electric bulbs is a piece of more pretentious character.

bill will be passed over the veto in the house when it is called up tomorrow. Support of the president's position was voted by only a few senators during the debate. Senators Lodge and Dillingham, leading the fight to override the president, declared the measure was voted by only a few senators during the debate. Senators Lodge and Dillingham, leading the fight to override the president, declared the measure was voted by only a few senators during the debate.

"I fall to understand why it is that the United States alone among nations is not thought to have the right that all nations have to say who shall come within its borders," said Senator Lodge. "It is the only country in the world where it is argued that people born in the United States who never have seen the United States are entitled to certain rights therein."

VOTE TO IMPOSE A LITERARY TEST

U. S. Senate Overrides Taft's Veto by Four to One Vote.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The Burnett-Dillingham immigration bill, vetoed by President Taft because it imposed a literary test upon immigrants, was passed over the president's veto in the senate today by a vote of 72 to 18. The overwhelming majority, given at the end of a short debate, in which President Taft's attitude was vigorously criticized, has strengthened the probability that the

PIANIST PLAYS HIS OWN MUSIC

Andor Von Coboly, Famous Composer and Musician, Now in Toronto.

RECITAL ON SATURDAY

First of Series to Be Given at Heintzman Piano Parlors.

To be honored with nineteen decorations and to have had a triumphal tour thru the twenty-four European countries of the world, being specially commanded to play before the reigning monarch in practically all of them, is the record of Andor Von Coboly, B.A., M.M., the famous Hungarian pianist and composer, who visits Toronto as the principal Canadian city in his tour of the world. Mr. Von Coboly has the distinction of being the only artist among the world's great pianists, who confines himself strictly to playing his own compositions.

The celebrated pianist was born in the little town of Transilvania, in Western Hungary, and has devoted himself to the study of music since he was five years of age. In his eleventh year he was sent to the Royal Academy of Music, at Budapest, where he studied for five years. This was followed by four years study at the Hiedelberg University, from which he graduated with honors. He later spent a year under the tutelage of Prof. Moszkowsky. Pianist Von Coboly is a post impressionist, composing not as he sees, but as he feels. His music has feelings. Although arriving here this week, he has already composed a splendid piece from an impressionist standpoint, "Carly, I Love You," which he is shortly to render at a public recital here. The first of these will be held at Heintzman Piano Parlors, on Saturday afternoon, on which occasion he will play his "Low Veldt Pictures" and "Carly, I Love You" in three parts, Love, Legend and Filtration.

These free Saturday concerts of Heintzman & Co. have become one of the musical features of the city.

The British public has not been so keen as the French in the matter of a public subscription for the aeroplane fleet.

The origin of the material taken from the various asphalt lakes is still a mystery. There is a proposition in China to make use of the remains of the "great wall" for the purposes of a railway around the city.

PILGRIM SISTERS STILL UNDAUNTED

They're Now at Wilmington, Delaware, Fatigued, But With Enthusiasm Strong.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 18.—(Can. Press).—Footsore and almost ready to drop from the effects of their week's tramp, the little band of suffragettes bound from New York to Washington today with undiminished ranks, although "Col." Craft, the last to arrive, has a badly injured ankle and walked the last few miles purely on nerve. "Gen." Rosalie Jones literally stumbled into this state. She tripped over a stone at the boundary line and picked herself up in Delaware.

Despite their weariness the speakers in the party conducted meetings tonight in the interest of the suffrage amendment now before the state legislature. Time will also be devoted to other meetings and the pilgrims all hope to have recovered sufficiently by Thursday to continue on to Newark, 12 miles nearer their destination.

Today's march from Chester was a series of ovations, which ended in the city hall, where Mayor Howell extended a formal welcome to the pilgrims.

To Get Rid of Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

(From Beauty's Mirror).

It is more important now than during the period of intense perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. In winter this interference greatly with excretion of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary macerated skin serves all the purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off an offensive skin, at the same time unclogging the pores. Minute particles of sebum come off day by day, causing the least pain or discomfort. Gradually the healthy, younger skin peeps out, and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you ever dreamed of acquiring. Macerated wax, obtainable at any drug store, is spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings. One ounce usually suffices.

For removing wrinkles, without stopping the pores with party stuff, help a never-failing formula: 1 oz. powdered asphaltum, dissolved in 1/2 oz. powdered hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for awhile; every line will vanish completely. Even the first application gives surprising results.

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY Your affairs will be unsettled and something unpleasant will occur in consequence. Journeys and changes are unfavorable, but some cheerful recreation will help to calm the mind and enable it to see the best course. Those born today will be restless and dissatisfied in seeking excitement. They will make the acquaintance of evil. Active outdoor play with cheerful companions and a training, philosophic, rather than a sectarian, is safest for these children.
