

REAL ESTATE NEWS

OVER A MILLION
PAID FOR CORNER

Yonge and King Street Sale is Largest Ever Made in Downtown Property.

Altho the announcement of the sale of the northeast corner of King and Yonge streets was made some time ago it was not until a few days ago that the deal was actually recorded. This is the largest frehold transfer ever made in Toronto downtown property, amounting to $1,100,000 or $12,000 a foot, based on the King street frontage, on which street the property is assessed. The size of the lot is eighty-one feet two and five-eighths inches on King street and one hundred and twelve feet two and a half inches on Yonge street. The right of the use of the lane on Yonge street, adjoining the property, is also given. The assessment on the lot is $461,140 and on the building $22,500. The purchase is made in the name of the Guardian Realty Company of Canada, Limited, a company formed by J. and M. L. Wood, who are superintending the erection of the new building.

Two mortgages, totaling $1,600,000, have been made to finance the twenty-story building. The first mortgage is held by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York and amounts to $1,200,000. The second was taken up by the Montreal Trust Company and is for $400,000. This mortgage is subject to the one held by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and the lease on the ground floor of the new building held by the Royal Bank of Canada. Both mortgages are bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, amounting to $96,000 a year.

MANY STUDENTS FOR NIGHT CLASSES

Pupils Engaged in Work During Day, Taking Advantage of Night Courses.

Every night this week light has been shining out thru the windows of the Jarvis street and Harbord street Collegiate Institutes, while within the building many young people of the city who are working during the day in commercial and industrial pursuits have been registering for the night classes for 1913-14. Dr. L. E. Embree, principal of the Jarvis street Collegiate Institute, states that many young people have already registered for the night classes and from present indications he believed that the enrollment of young men and women will be very large.

Only those who are working during the day can be admitted to the night classes and they must either have passed the entrance examination or show that they are ready for high school work. Tuition in the night classes is free, but a fee of $2 is taken on registration and returned at the end of the spring term to all students who attend 75 per cent. of the lectures. The classes are held five nights each week from 7.30 to 9.30, and the terms correspond to those of the high school. The subjects taught are the same as those required for junior matriculation, and there is a possibility that a special class in English may be formed for students of foreign speech.

The first class will be called next Monday evening, but registration will continue till Oct. 16 at Jarvis street Collegiate on Monday and Wednesday evenings and at Harbord on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. On registration students should present their entrance certificates or letters from teachers or others stating that they are qualified to take up high school work.

HEAD OF FIRM
THIRTY YEARS

William Stone Honored by
His Employees and Business Associates.

In recognition of thirty years at the head of the concern bearing his name, William Stone, president of Stone Limited, was made the recipient of an address and a presentation at the hands of his employees and business associates yesterday afternoon. J. D. Kelly, head of the art and designing department, read the address which was incorporated in a beautifully bound volume covered in brown seal and hand-tooled with gold. The book contained also a series of photographs depicting the growth of the business from its inception on York street in 1883 to the present. In addition Mr. Stone received a beautiful bronze figure, typifying strength and upright character. Altho taken completely by surprise, Mr. Stone voiced his thanks in a speech which recalled many of the vicissitudes in the history of his firm, including the Globe fire and the publication of "The Canadian" and "The World" in 1885.

PRETTY TRIMMING.
An economical and pretty trimming for children's garments is made by stitching to rounded pieces, tape or bias finishing braid and placing along the middle French knots of mercerized cotton in shades to match garment.

WITHOUT ODOR.
It is said that if two English walnuts are dropped into the kettle in which cauliflower or cabbage are being cooked the unpleasant odor from these vegetables while cooking will be avoided.

BUILDING PERMITS

J. Williams, Pricefield road, near Chumby ave. brick dwelling, 5,000
George Webb, Summerhill ave. brick and stone shed, 1,500
Robert Lupton, 526-24 Carlaw, four brick houses, 8,500
F. D. Parmenter, Glenora ave. near Avenue road, brick dwelling, 4,000
Thomas E. Pausage, 123 East Queen, brick dwelling and dairy, 4,000
L. Stewart, Gothic ave. near Quebec ave. brick dwelling, 4,500
W. F. McCutcheon, Greenlaw ave. two pairs semi-detached brick and stone dwellings, 7,000
Four permits for garages, alterations, etc., 1,015
Total, $35,515

WEST KING STREET
PROPERTY LEASED

Five Year Lease Totals Eighteen
Thousand Dollars—New Record for the District.

There is a renewed activity on King street, west of York street, and altho no sales of property have been made, the frontage in this section of King street is bringing a high rental and several new records have been made.

The building at 163 West King street, owned by J. McCaffery, has been leased to the Canadian Billiard Table and Supply Company, manufacturers of billiard tables, for five years for $18,000, or $360 per month. There are three stories in the structure, the lower floor being thirty by eighty-two feet and the upper floors thirty by forty feet. The leases will occupy the whole building.

NO AGREEMENT
YET WITH G. T. P.

Respecting the Operation of the Superior Junction—
Cochrane Line.

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—(Special.)—Enquiry at the office of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission today elicited the information that no agreement had as yet been arrived at with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company respecting the operation of the line between Superior Junction and Cochrane. This line should be in condition for some freight traffic this winter, but it is not likely that Transcontinental passenger trains will be running between Toronto and Winnipeg, which is the route of the G.T.P. and the N.T.R. Commission should come to terms in the near future.

The line between Winnipeg and Superior Junction is being operated under a contract, by which the government receives a regular service for a percentage of the cost of construction. But it is not likely that the company would pay any such rental for the line between Superior Junction and Cochrane. At present the contractors are giving a regular service for a percentage of the cost of construction. But it is not likely that the company would pay any such rental for the line between Superior Junction and Cochrane. At present the contractors are giving a regular service for a percentage of the cost of construction.

Of course the Grand Trunk Pacific is giving a regular service for a percentage of the cost of construction. But it is not likely that the company would pay any such rental for the line between Superior Junction and Cochrane. At present the contractors are giving a regular service for a percentage of the cost of construction.

MINES AT COBALT
IMPRESS CODERRE

Minister Promises That Federal Mining Law Will Soon Be Enacted.

COBALT, Sept. 5.—(Special.)—"I had no idea you were spending so much money to take the gold and silver out of the ground," said Louis Coderre, minister of mines, who arrived today with the geologists' party. "I left Ottawa on Aug. 12 and have been since mining and mining men ever since, but before that," said the minister, smiling, "I had never seen a mine." The minister said he quite understood the crying needs of the mining industry was a uniform Dominion law, and a draft of one was being prepared with the assistance of the Canadian Mining Institute, of which Mr. Coderre and the other members of the party this morning had gathered at the Cobalt Hotel.

CALGARY TO STOP "WILD CATTING."

CALGARY, Sept. 5.—(Can. Press.)—Mayor Sinnott has announced his intention to frame civic legislation which will prevent "wild catting" in rural subdivisions. He proposes the formation of a realty board to pass upon all subdivisions. Firms which are not approved by this board would not be given licenses to operate.

THE COWARD

Wilkins sat moody and alone in his own room, thinking bitterly of the family ambition that had forced him into a crack cavalry regiment against his inclination.

When a child he had been rather badly hurt by falling from his pony, and for a long time afterwards retained a vague fear of all horses. This nervousness, however, had gradually outgrown, or had thought so.

Even after joining the 49th he had met with no difficulty for a time, and the hughes of his youth seemed a thing of the past. One day he had been "ragged" into mounting Fear, the regimental terror. Only then did he discover that the old feeling still possessed him. Indeed, the ignominious figure he cut served not only to make a bad impression on his brother officers, but destroyed the confidence in himself that had slowly grown.

Just as some people dislike cats in an unreasonable way, so Wilkins found his fear of horses steadily increasing. The confidence that he had in no one, and managed to carry out his ordinary duties, his position in the regiment, soon became uncomfortable. On one occasion after his charger had bolted with him, he found his belongings neatly packed into his horse's baggage tent that his absence would not be regretted.

Often during the past few weeks, he had been on the point of resigning, but the thought of his father's anger, and the thought of his own position, had held him back. He was a self-made man, imaginative and rough, yet determined to see his son occupy a place in the city to which he himself, with all his wealth, could never aspire.

His fight for success had made him not only immune from the exasperating mental torture his son was undergoing, but quite unable to believe in the existence of a stranger's intention.

As young Wilkins turned over the situation in his mind, there was a knock at his door, and his servant brought in a letter. "I got this in the rack as I came up," he said. "Will you require me again tonight, sir?"

"Very good, sir." Left to himself, Wilkins handled the note absentmindedly. It had not been there the post, and as the envelope bore the regimental crest, he expected it to contain some mess bill or account. Absorbed in his own thoughts, the young officer tore open the letter carelessly, but in an instant his attention was aroused. At first sight the envelope seemed empty, then a white feather fluttered slowly to the floor.

For a moment or two Wilkins sat staring at the strange object, but as his significance came to him, his face grew white and hard. Almost mechanically he picked up the symbol of cowardice, replaced it in the envelope, and put both into his pocketbook.

To rush out and find the author of the insult was his first impulse. But he soon realized the futility of such a course.

Far into the night the subaltern sat brooding over the difficulty. To resign seemed the only solution of the matter, but he did not like to see his commanding officer's preparatory to sending him to the front.

Early next morning he made his way to the commandant's quarters. The old martinet proved to be surprisingly human. He listened patiently to his subordinate's story, and then, with a count of his position, about which perhaps the senior officer knew more than he, he said: "You are a brave fellow, incident was never mentioned."

"Your trouble," said the commandant at last, "is nerves—nothing else. To rebuild your confidence, you must swell and charge you handsomely for doing it. I will give you a complete change. I'll give you a long leave. Go abroad; travel about for a month or two, and you'll come back with nerve instead of nerves. Bless my soul, when I was your age—"

But the gallant colonel's reminiscences were interrupted by a knock. A messenger came in with a letter, and in a fortnight Wilkins had started on a tour through Egypt and up the Nile. Whether or not his nerves were restored his nerves and horseman's sense is a question that must remain unanswered. The senior officer had scarcely arrived at Port Said ere he was suddenly recalled by news of his father's death. His own situation altered.

Instead of being almost of nonentity dependent on a quarterly allowance, for his very pocket money, he was in a position of great wealth and influence, with more say in the affairs of the regiment than he had in his own. The control of his services and other interests needed all his time and energy. To continue his military career was now impossible, even had he desired it.

A very short notice of his resignation appeared in the Gazette. Wilkins himself had begun to think of his regimental life as little more than a nightmare, when one morning he awoke to find his situation altered. Pushing the others aside, he picked up this particular envelope, and spent more time trying to guess the identity of his correspondent than he would have taken to open the letter and look at the signature. When at last he did satisfy his curiosity his eyebrows went up in astonishment, and he read the note his surprise increased.

The letter was from a fellow subaltern named Stacey, from whom Wilkins had probably not received half a dozen friendly words before.

This gentleman was to explain at considerable length, and in a roundabout way, how a friend of his who was in the motor business (apparently solely for the good of his health) had put him on to the very latest thing in cars at a fraction of the market price; a bargain that must be seen to be realized, etc. "In any case," the writer concluded, "I shall be passing thru your district tomorrow afternoon with the car, and will give myself the pleasure of looking up my old comrade."

Wilkins sat moody and alone in his own room, thinking bitterly of the family ambition that had forced him into a crack cavalry regiment against his inclination.

When a child he had been rather badly hurt by falling from his pony, and for a long time afterwards retained a vague fear of all horses. This nervousness, however, had gradually outgrown, or had thought so.

Even after joining the 49th he had met with no difficulty for a time, and the hughes of his youth seemed a thing of the past. One day he had been "ragged" into mounting Fear, the regimental terror. Only then did he discover that the old feeling still possessed him. Indeed, the ignominious figure he cut served not only to make a bad impression on his brother officers, but destroyed the confidence in himself that had slowly grown.

Just as some people dislike cats in an unreasonable way, so Wilkins found his fear of horses steadily increasing. The confidence that he had in no one, and managed to carry out his ordinary duties, his position in the regiment, soon became uncomfortable. On one occasion after his charger had bolted with him, he found his belongings neatly packed into his horse's baggage tent that his absence would not be regretted.

Often during the past few weeks, he had been on the point of resigning, but the thought of his father's anger, and the thought of his own position, had held him back. He was a self-made man, imaginative and rough, yet determined to see his son occupy a place in the city to which he himself, with all his wealth, could never aspire.

His fight for success had made him not only immune from the exasperating mental torture his son was undergoing, but quite unable to believe in the existence of a stranger's intention.

As young Wilkins turned over the situation in his mind, there was a knock at his door, and his servant brought in a letter. "I got this in the rack as I came up," he said. "Will you require me again tonight, sir?"

"Very good, sir." Left to himself, Wilkins handled the note absentmindedly. It had not been there the post, and as the envelope bore the regimental crest, he expected it to contain some mess bill or account. Absorbed in his own thoughts, the young officer tore open the letter carelessly, but in an instant his attention was aroused. At first sight the envelope seemed empty, then a white feather fluttered slowly to the floor.

For a moment or two Wilkins sat staring at the strange object, but as his significance came to him, his face grew white and hard. Almost mechanically he picked up the symbol of cowardice, replaced it in the envelope, and put both into his pocketbook.

To rush out and find the author of the insult was his first impulse. But he soon realized the futility of such a course.

Far into the night the subaltern sat brooding over the difficulty. To resign seemed the only solution of the matter, but he did not like to see his commanding officer's preparatory to sending him to the front.

Early next morning he made his way to the commandant's quarters. The old martinet proved to be surprisingly human. He listened patiently to his subordinate's story, and then, with a count of his position, about which perhaps the senior officer knew more than he, he said: "You are a brave fellow, incident was never mentioned."

"Your trouble," said the commandant at last, "is nerves—nothing else. To rebuild your confidence, you must swell and charge you handsomely for doing it. I will give you a complete change. I'll give you a long leave. Go abroad; travel about for a month or two, and you'll come back with nerve instead of nerves. Bless my soul, when I was your age—"

But the gallant colonel's reminiscences were interrupted by a knock. A messenger came in with a letter, and in a fortnight Wilkins had started on a tour through Egypt and up the Nile. Whether or not his nerves were restored his nerves and horseman's sense is a question that must remain unanswered. The senior officer had scarcely arrived at Port Said ere he was suddenly recalled by news of his father's death. His own situation altered.

Instead of being almost of nonentity dependent on a quarterly allowance, for his very pocket money, he was in a position of great wealth and influence, with more say in the affairs of the regiment than he had in his own. The control of his services and other interests needed all his time and energy. To continue his military career was now impossible, even had he desired it.

A very short notice of his resignation appeared in the Gazette. Wilkins himself had begun to think of his regimental life as little more than a nightmare, when one morning he awoke to find his situation altered. Pushing the others aside, he picked up this particular envelope, and spent more time trying to guess the identity of his correspondent than he would have taken to open the letter and look at the signature. When at last he did satisfy his curiosity his eyebrows went up in astonishment, and he read the note his surprise increased.

The letter was from a fellow subaltern named Stacey, from whom Wilkins had probably not received half a dozen friendly words before.

This gentleman was to explain at considerable length, and in a roundabout way, how a friend of his who was in the motor business (apparently solely for the good of his health) had put him on to the very latest thing in cars at a fraction of the market price; a bargain that must be seen to be realized, etc. "In any case," the writer concluded, "I shall be passing thru your district tomorrow afternoon with the car, and will give myself the pleasure of looking up my old comrade."

Visitors to the Exhibition and citizens generally should not fail to secure a copy of this week's Toronto Sunday World.

The art section has many views of Canada's greatest Fair, and the eight pages of this section are replete with pictures of current events and various phases of our national life.

The Sunday World is now recognized as Canada's greatest week-end newspaper, and so far in advance of any other Canadian paper of a similar character that the patronage extended justifies the assumption that it is being appreciated.

The colored sections are again enlarged this week. The magazine section has as a frontispiece a group of college girls, showing the costumes and surroundings in their natural colors. Another page in this section, also printed in colors, shows the costumes for school girls of various ages, and contains some excellent suggestions for the lady school teachers in the matter of dress.

The literary sections have not been neglected, and the pages devoted to literature, science and education contain some interesting features, including a review of the book, "William Adolphus Turpin," by Wm. Banks, a local writer, and the new school song by Rudyard Kipling. There are two columns of notes on the new books and some interesting comments on the old ones. This section also contains some fine drawings by "Nell Brinkley."

In Kit's Column is a weekly letter of comment, and an article by Margaret Bell, entitled "Labor Days and Others."

The comic section is always funny, and this week includes "Jimmy," "Their Only Child," "Housan Lott" and "Happy Hooligan."

For sale by all newsdealers, newsboys and on all railway trains.

much of the embroidery which will characterize next winter's gowns. Not manual cleverness, at least, if she has an artistic and original color sense, she will be able to achieve her efforts, no matter whether she can do the embroidery or not. With a comparatively insignificant amount of effort she can give an otherwise commonplace costume the touch of individuality which is, above everything else, the essential thing in the present style.

Of course, too, the "woman behind the needle" can do much this year to augment her wardrobe. The chub, gump, and collar and cuff sets, which came in with the spring styles, promise to play an equal important role next winter. They are not only becoming—almost universal—so—but may be used to give variety if one's wardrobe is limited. They call for finer needlework than braiding does, but they are not beyond the ability of the average woman.

THE LATEST IN WAIST COATS.

Two genuinely new importations were shown by a leading shop the past week in New York Times writer. And these novelties were nothing more or less than—waistcoats. What is more, they were in the very latest duster, for which last week I predicted a vogue among the select who can afford this most beautiful of fabrics. These two new waistcoats are the most interesting things which have come to show the probable trend of styles this autumn.

Wilkins himself had begun to think of his regimental life as little more than a nightmare, when one morning he awoke to find his situation altered. Pushing the others aside, he picked up this particular envelope, and spent more time trying to guess the identity of his correspondent than he would have taken to open the letter and look at the signature. When at last he did satisfy his curiosity his eyebrows went up in astonishment, and he read the note his surprise increased.

The letter was from a fellow subaltern named Stacey, from whom Wilkins had probably not received half a dozen friendly words before.

This gentleman was to explain at considerable length, and in a roundabout way, how a friend of his who was in the motor business (apparently solely for the good of his health) had put him on to the very latest thing in cars at a fraction of the market price; a bargain that must be seen to be realized, etc. "In any case," the writer concluded, "I shall be passing thru your district tomorrow afternoon with the car, and will give myself the pleasure of looking up my old comrade."

Wilkins sat moody and alone in his own room, thinking bitterly of the family ambition that had forced him into a crack cavalry regiment against his inclination.

When a child he had been rather badly hurt by falling from his pony, and for a long time afterwards retained a vague fear of all horses. This nervousness, however, had gradually outgrown, or had thought so.

Come Today to Surrey Gardens
5 Acre
Market Gardens
272 x 802 Feet
$400 an Acre
Very Easy Terms

You are buying these big five-acre plots at wholesale prices. If after inspecting the property you find five acres to be too big for your needs, you can cut it up and sell in acres or half-acres at a profit.

The property is situated within easy access of the city, and in a district where market gardens are producing big crops and making profits for the owners of these small farms. We are motoring our clients out this afternoon. Join us!

Drop in during the morning for a plan and full particulars, and arrange for a seat in one of our cars. If you cannot make the trip today, sign and mail the coupon for full particulars.

Hawk, Limited
34 Richmond St. E.
One door east from Victoria
Tel. Main 5457

Gentlemen:
Kindly send me particulars of Surrey Gardens.
Name .....
Address .....
D

The property is situated within easy access of the city, and in a district where market gardens are producing big crops and making profits for the owners of these small farms. We are motoring our clients out this afternoon. Join us!

Drop in during the morning for a plan and full particulars, and arrange for a seat in one of our cars. If you cannot make the trip today, sign and mail the coupon for full particulars.

SALE OF LOTS
AT
PRINCE GEORGE
BRITISH COLUMBIA

SITUATED at the confluence of the Fraser and Nechaco Rivers in Central British Columbia, 450 miles north-east of Vancouver, B.C., and 467 miles east of Prince Rupert, B.C., or midway between Prince Rupert and Edmonton, Alta., on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

By reason of its central location, Prince George will be the natural distributing point for the extensive territory comprised in the Pacific Province of the Dominion, and it has therefore long been the expectation of the general public that upon the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Prince George will early become a large and important centre.

Having purchased what was known as the Fort George Indian Reserve No. 1 for the purpose of locating a townsite thereon, the Grand Trunk Pacific Development Company, Limited, has caused the same to be surveyed and platted and will offer lots in this townsite for sale by public auction at Vancouver, British Columbia, Wednesday September 17th, 1913, and at Edmonton, Alberta, Wednesday, September 24th, 1913.

The terms of this sale will be one-quarter cash and the balance payable in one, two and three years with six per cent interest. For further particulars and plans apply to:

G. U. RILEY,
Land Commissioner, Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, Winnipeg, Manitoba

Toronto Land Values

despite the stringency in the money market, have shown no tendency to decrease. No one has lost faith in the soundness of investments in land within or near the city limits.

Gledhill Heights

is a subdivision within a few minutes' walk of the Danforth car line. It is good, level land, and may be bought on EASY TERMS. Let us show it to you.

The Title and Trust Company
BAY AND RICHMOND STREETS.
Main 6216 6216

FOR LEASE
93 YONGE ST.

Next to Strand Theatre. Apply

The McGee
Real Estate Co.
93 Yonge Street
Office No. 5

It Will Just Suit
You

LAWRENCE PARK

For the new home there is no place so delightful in every way as Lawrence Park. Illustrated Booklet sent on request.

Dovercourt Land
Building and Estate Co., Limited.
64 KING STREET EAST.
Tel. 3, 7261.

JOAKEY'S
WELLINGTON KNIFE POLISH

Best for Cleaning and Polishing Cutlery, 30¢, 60¢, 75¢, 90¢, 1.00, 1.25, 1.50, 2.00, 2.50, 3.00, 3.50, 4.00, 4.50, 5.00, 5.50, 6.00, 6.50, 7.00, 7.50, 8.00, 8.50, 9.00, 9.50, 10.00, 10.50, 11.00, 11.50, 12.00, 12.50, 13.00, 13.50, 14.00, 14.50, 15.00, 15.50, 16.00, 16.50, 17.00, 17.50, 18.00, 18.50, 19.00, 19.50, 20.00, 20.50, 21.00, 21.50, 22.00, 22.50, 23.00, 23.50, 24.00, 24.50, 25.00, 25.50, 26.00, 26.50, 27.00, 27.50, 28.00, 28.50, 29.00, 29.50, 30.00, 30.50, 31.00, 31.50, 32.00, 32.50, 33.00, 33.50, 34.00, 34.50, 35.00, 35.50, 36.00, 36.50, 37.00, 37.50, 38.00, 38.50, 39.00, 39.50, 40.00, 40.50, 41.00, 41.50, 42.00, 42.50, 43.00, 43.50, 44.00, 44.50, 45.00, 45.50, 46.00, 46.50, 47.00, 47.50, 48.00, 48.50, 49.00, 49.50, 50.00, 50.50, 51.00, 51.50, 52.00, 52.50, 53.00, 53.50, 54.00, 54.50, 55.00, 55.50, 56.00, 56.50, 57.00, 57.50, 58.00, 58.50, 59.00, 59.50, 60.00, 60.50, 61.00, 61.50, 62.00, 62.50, 63.00, 63.50, 64.00, 64.50, 65.00, 65.50, 66.00, 66.50, 67.00, 67.50, 68.00, 68.50, 69.00, 69.50, 70.00, 70.50, 71.00, 71.50, 72.00, 72.50, 73.00, 73.50, 74.00, 74.50, 75.00, 75.50, 76.00, 76.50, 77.00, 77.50, 78.00, 78.50, 79.00, 79.50, 80.00, 80.50, 81.00, 81.50, 82.00, 82.50, 83.00, 83.50, 84.00, 84.50, 85.00, 85.50, 86.00, 86.50, 87.00, 87.50, 88.00, 88.50, 89.00, 89.50, 90.00, 90.50, 91.00, 91.50, 92.00, 92.50, 93.00, 93.50, 94.00, 94.50, 95.00, 95.50, 96.00, 96.50, 97.00, 97.50, 98.00, 98.50, 99.00, 99.50, 100.00, 100.50, 101.00, 101.50, 102.00, 102.50, 103.00, 103.50, 104.00, 104.50, 105.00, 105.50, 106.00, 106.50, 107.00, 107.50, 108.00, 108.50, 109.00, 109.50, 110.00, 110.50, 111.00, 111.50, 112.00, 112.50, 113.00, 113.50, 114.00, 114.50, 115.00, 115.50, 116.00, 116.50, 117.00, 117.50, 118.00, 118.50, 119.00, 119.50, 120.00, 120.50, 121.00, 121.50, 122.00, 122.50, 123.00, 123.50, 124.00, 124.50, 125.00, 125.50, 126.00, 126.50, 127.00, 127.50, 128.00, 128.50, 129.00, 129.50, 130.00, 130.50, 131.00, 131.50, 132.00, 132.50, 133.00, 133.50, 134.00, 134.50, 135.00, 135.50, 136.00, 136.50, 137.00, 137.50, 138.00, 138.50, 139.00, 139.50, 140.00, 140.50, 141.00, 141.50, 142.00, 142.50, 143.00, 143.50, 144.00, 144.50, 145.00, 145.50, 146.00, 146.50, 147.00, 147.50, 148.00, 148.50, 149.00, 149.50, 150.00, 150.50, 151.00, 151.50, 152.00, 152.50, 153.00, 153.50, 154.00, 154.50, 155.00, 155.50, 156.00, 156.50, 157.00, 157.50, 158.00, 158.50, 159.00, 159.50, 160.00, 160.50, 161.00, 161.50, 162.00, 162.50, 163.00,