BIGGEST THING IN BASEBALL IN BOSTON, J. EVERS' RECEPTION

The biggest thing in connection with baseball in Boston since the celebration of the winning of the world's series by the Red Sox in 1912 was the reception given Johnny Evers when he went to the Hub from his home in Troy to sign a four-year contract with the Braves. Evers certainly must have been given a good impression of Boston's future attitude toward him, while Boston on its part took to Johnny like a duck to water. Evers went over from Troy Wednesday and registered at the Coppley, President Caffrey and Manager Stallings of the Braves reached Boston from New York a little later and went to the hotel where Evers was stopping. Evers was waiting in the lobby for them. Manager Stallings stepped forward and gripped the hand of the pride of Cuyahoga, and the season of 1914 was officially opened. The boss of the works shook hands with both of them, and then with himself, and remarked that his $60,000 second baseman looked better every time he thought about it.

Meanwhile the insurance agent, Bill Sweeney, was making a date with the Trojan for the latter's preliminary examination incident to the $10,000 policy that the Braves' management had arranged to take to their most expensive injury before the first game. Evers, who was the keynote man of the season, was the first to be welcomed to the city. The Evers party had just about given the hotel lobby the once-over when Secretary Nickerson phoned that a detachment of 600 newspaper men and fans, including a squad of camera artists, was at the office of the club, waiting for the two bosses of the star boarder to come on down and buy a supper or so.

In accordance with this information the party repaired to the Paddock building. Everybody shook hands with Evers and his superior officers, and the photographers collared the famous trio in the interior sanctum and fired one large broadside of flash powder at them for luck. After this the multitude dropped itself about in small but artistic groups all over the expensive rugs and gazed at top speed for thirty minutes.

Later, about nine-tenths of the entire outfit gathered in Hurbur's hotel, where, after a couple of rounds, they sat down to a couple of more rounds and some steak. With Paul Shannon as the main instigator, the evening drifted into a speech-making occasion. First and foremost, Louis Pieper, the most finished toastmaster in the New England League, toast-mastered a welcome to the Trojan. Louis' speech showed how handy it is to have a college education, and after it was all over Evers acknowledged that it was apparent to him that the doctor which he had with him was a director.

Then Evers himself spoke briefly. He paid a tribute to both of his bosses, thanking them for their treatment during the past week, and comparing it with the treatment he had received in the past. He was tied up in the Murphy case, and will release him unconditionally if it is granted. The doctor which he had with him was a director.

The list of Canadian League managers of the eight clubs is now complete, as follows: Ottawa (Champions)—Frank Shaugnessy; London (Terns)—D. F. C. Rea; Erie (Sailors)—George Smith; Toronto (Maple Leafs)—Eddie Holly; Brantford (Red Sox)—George Deaneau; Peterboro (Pates)—Curley Blount; St. Thomas (Falcons)—Garnet Craven; Hamilton (Tigers)—Dr. Yates.

Cleveland fans, especially those of the old guard, have put their stamp of approval on the shift of the Toledo club to the Sixth City, writes Ed. Bang in the Cleveland News. Charles W. Somers, owner of the Cleveland American League and Cleveland American Association franchises, has received hundreds of letters, telephone messages and personal calls from fans, pleading him their loyal support in his undertaking.

March 16 is the date on which the players must report at the Royal's training camp at Newwood. Manager Brannan and the Royal's owner will have their last contest before the camp opens next Saturday, following the meeting of the International League in New York. The progress of the Federal League will be one of the points of business touched upon at the meeting.

WISCONSIN COURT MIXES WITH BOXING COMMISSION. MILWAUKEE WIS., March 4.—The suspension of Paolky McFarland for one year from engaging in boxing contests in Wisconsin, ordered by the Wisconsin Boxing Commission on Dec. 16, for alleged stalling in his contest with Jack Britton in Milwaukee on Dec. 3, was today set aside by Judge Eschweiler of the circuit court, as he said the proceeding was irregular. The suspension ruling of Monday last stands, however, as McFarland was given an opportunity then to be heard by the commission, but failed to make his appearance, either in person or by counsel.
