It was very sweet and unselfish to let me go without carrying the anxiety I certainly should have had if I had known of what was to come to you. She had not been brave; she had not been unselfish. ENGLAND'S GREATEST MELODRAMA MAURICE TOURNEUR'S "SPORTING LIFE"

"SPORTING LIFE," when presented at the Drury Lane Theatre, London, more than 20 years ago, scored an instantaneous success. It is still conceded to be the greatest drama of English sporting life.

THE film production, under the most able direction of Maurice Tourneur, is even more thrilling, more dramatic, and more realistic than the stage play.

A^N absorbing love story, a thrilling prize fight at the National Sporting Club of London, and the exciting Derby Race at Epsom, combine to make this one of the greatest film productions of the year.
