PREMIER AND PROCESS SERVER. Indignant Attorney General and Dutiful Attorney's Clerk-Scene in the Presence Chamber. An amusing story is told of Premier Hardy's interview with the young man who yesterday called upon him to serve him with the writ in connection with the South Brant protest. The Attorney General is on occasions a very pleasant and affable gentleman; on the other hand he has long wor nthe sobriquet, "Little Thunder." It is in this guise that the young gentleman, who, armed with the writ, called upon him yesterday, will remember him.

When the young man waked into the Attorney General's office, Mr. Hardy asked in his brusque way, "What do you want?"

The visitor stated his mission.

"Would you dare serve the Attorney General with such a document?" and he rangloudly for his secretary, who hastily appeared.

"Take down the man's name," thundered the Premier.

"What is your name?"

The visitor confessed.

"Who sent you here?"

"The Conservative committee."

"Do you know who I am?"

"Have you got down that admission?"—to the secretary.

The young man remarked that he was prepared to take his chances of prosecution for contempt, delivered his missive and escaped.
