The Man In The Street

Summer weather at last? Makes one think that vacation time really has arrived.

Now watch the scramble for dates when the boss and entire staff want their holidays at the same time.

Dominion Day seems to be the beginning of summer in this climate.

As a public holiday, July 1 was all right, but how many fishing stories did you hear to listen to yesterday without any corroborative evidence being offered? The license clerk reports there are two dogs named Kaiser in this city; rather rough on the dogs.

On the other hand, not knowing their breed, we cannot say how hard it is on the Kaiser.

But Are They?

If both city and company are as well satisfied with the court decision as they say they are the next street repair job should be marked by a love feast instead of a civil war.

Orville Wright's religion will not let him consider a job directing the British aerial fleet; wonder if it keeps him from taking his share of the royalty on the air craft sold for good purposes.

A Study for Ornithologists

Standard society notes: "Automobiles were seen flying along in Hampton. Strange what things take to flight in these progressive times, but this shows the necessity of every citizen being an expert mechanic. It is also safer to fly than motor on the Hampton road.

Another "white hope" gone—man died in St. Thomas, Ont., yesterday, weighing 200 pounds, and measuring nine feet about his waist.

What would he have insured an arm for when Jess Willard has his insured for $100,000?

German apologist writes: "My countrymen are deep thinkers." Yes, deep sea thinkers, in the matter of torpedoing innocents.

And some there are who think their thoughts are derived from a very deep and bottomless pit, name unnecessary.

Curios For Future Years

Commissioner Potts intends to have parts of roadway between Douglas avenue and Indiantown photographed. Any machine which could stand for a picture of such a stretch as this could be used to good advantage on the firing line.

Many an auto driver will want one of those pictures to show to friends, proving what a clever rough-rider he has been to go over that roadway safely.

Meanwhile, taking photographs of the road will not make it any easier to drive over.

Who's Next?

Garland, Tony P. brought into the limelight through the war-supplies activities, has retired to private life. Now, if he'd only kept that $6,000 made on Red Cross dressings, etc., think what a handsome addition he could have made to the soda fountain in his drug store!

BROTHER OF ST. JOHN POLICEMAN WINNER OF V. C.

Corporal Wilfred Fuller Gains Highest Honor Which Comes to British Soldier

a brother of policeman George Fuller of this city.

Corporal Fuller is a member of the Grenadier Guards and has been on active service since the outbreak of the war. After his wonderful achievement he was awarded the Victoria Cross, and also was sent to assist in the great recruiting campaign throughout England.

A cut in an English paper shows him standing on an elevated platform, with the Duchess of Portland on his right, and the mayor of Portland on his left. In addition to being famous for having won military honors, he is also well known in athletic circles, having in his possession several medals which he captured in running races.

WEATHER HAS LOST BIRD LIFE TO THE PROVINCE

The backward weather since the opening of the summer months has meant a loss to the province in bird life. With the first coming of fine weather some time ago, feathered strangers to these parts were noticed along the coast. They would probably have stayed for the warmer months had the weather remained favorable, but coolness of the air and heavy rains caused their death in hundreds. Very many of them were insectivorous birds, and in consequence of the weather causing no insects to be about, they were deprived of sustenance, and if they were not able to get away from the country, died of starvation.

There are still in different parts of the province, however, birds which withstood the rigors of the weather so tolling upon many of their kind, that migratory birds who thrive in the finest of weather. It has been said that several newcomers have been seen, but up to the present no definite knowledge of them has been had by local ornithologists. It has also been said that the European war has driven some of the larger birds from the continent across the ocean, but this is not credited here.

A. Gordon Leavitt, speaking of the matter, said that he had seen some scarlet tanagers in some parts of the province this summer. While they were not new to the New Brunswick woods, they were quite new to the province. He noticed a number of other birds which could be classed as unusual visitors, but there might be some of their kind in the province where he had not been.

LIEUT. ED. MOONEY IS HELPING ATHLETICS AMONG VALCARTIER MEN

There is plenty of good, hard work for the soldiers at Valcartier but there is time also for considerable enjoyment. G. W. Patoe of West St. John, with the 6th C. M. R., who is home on furlough, says that the men are enjoying thoroughly both work and play. The mounted rifles include in the ranks a large number of athletes and in the various sports which have been held have made a good showing. They have one of the best ball teams in camp and have shown up well in contests with the representatives of other battalions.

Lieut. Edward Mooney of St. John has taken a strong interest in the promotion of sports among the men and takes a hand himself. He plays third base with the ball team. Arrangements are being made for a boxing match between him and an Upper Canadian officer.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. Willis, rector of St. Jude's. The bride was attended by her youngest sister, little Miss Addie Johnson, while F. A. Macnamara of Toronto did the honors for the groom. Following the ceremony there was a reception of the bride and groom at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wheaton took the train for St. John where they will be the guests of Mr. Wheaton's mother at 140 Carmarthen street.
