AN INDEX TO A HORSE'S CHAR-ACTER.

Phrenology, as applied to horses, says the Westminster Gazette, is a new and interesting study, and the following maxim should be carefully studied by all lovers and owners of Every horse carries an index to his temper and intelligence in his face. The teachable animal is broad and flat between the eyes; the bony ridge of his face dishes slightly from the point mis race disnes slightly from the point where the face narrows towards the nostrils. His ears are well set, sensi-tive and far apart, with a well-defined ridge of bone extending across the top of the head between them. Always feel for this ridge when judging a horse. The eye should be large, clear and bright, with a prominent ridge of bone along the inner and upper edge of the socket.

Moneton spent between two and three hours in the cell. Mrs. Atkinson called upon Buck frequently, and it is said influenced him to re-pent. Sullivan said he had three particular friends, Mrs. Atkinson, whom he character-ized as a "noble woman." Father Cornier and Miss McDougall of Dorchester. He did not wish to be understood as saying that he had no other friends, but that these persons had been specially kind to him. John spends a great part of his time in reading and writing. Jalior Bowes told the writer he had archibied up nearly all the pa-per there was around the place. He reads a very great deal and is now complaining some of his eyes. When it was suggested that perhaps the reason his eyes were trou-bling was because he never had done much reading, he snswered quickly: "Oh no, that is not ft; I was always a reader." Sullivan has travelled much more than the average man. He left home when he was about twenty, and has seen a big lot of this world. "I have gone around this world twice," he said, in speaking of the matter, "and by God's grace I hope to see consider-able of the next world some day soon." "I am prepared to die," he said in answer to a question. "I am willing and ready to walk out there on the 12th of March. I am not looking forward to a commutation of the sentence, nor do I expect a new trial. If I am given one, all right; but I have no hope along these lines. I am not afraid to die, in fact I would sooner hang than spend one year in that place," pointing to the peniten-tiary. "I have no desire to be buried alive there. There is not much to live for any-way, and a man may as well go first as ast." The and his peculiar ideas with refer-

A Glassville letter to the Woodstoc Dispatch says: "As the diamond jubi-

The inscription reads 20th June, 1837. It semes that in that year some loyal Tumbermen or royalist pioneer blazed doors, and a large number of admir-the tree and cut the inscription which ers of Ballington Booth and the volis now almost covered with a subse quent growth of wood. THE GOLD CRAZE.

(Vancouver World.) As was predicted would be the case, the exodus from the east into Kooteay has begun in real earnest. Every incoming train and steamer from north and south is crowded with eager, determined men, who are going into the modern El Dorado of the to better their position, some to make fortunes and others to lose what little money they have brought with them. That there will be disappointed ones goes without saying, whilst others will more than realize their expectations. Kootenay will be a very section of the province for some years to come, and the probabilities are that its population in the end of the 19th century will more than double that of all other parts of British Columbia.
