THE DISSOLUTION OF SECOND DUMA

The News Was Received in St. Petersburg With Perfect Tranquillity
NO DISTURBANCES
Outbreak of Agrarian Disorders is Expected Later On—Would Not Spare Bullets

ST. PETERSBURG, June 16.—The dissolution of the second Duma was received through St. Petersburg with perfect tranquillity. Thanks to the precautionary measures taken by the authorities order prevailed today in this city, and in no place in Russia, so far as is known, were any serious disturbances. No reports of disorder in the interior have been received up to midnight.

Demonstrations among St. Petersburg workmen are anticipated tomorrow but the authorities profess to be chiefly apprehensive over the possibility of rioting and racial excesses in Odessa and Kiev and other cities where party feeling runs high. An outbreak of agrarian disorders in several parts of the empire is anticipated later, when the peasantry learn of the dissolution but a spirit of quiet confidence in the ability of the government to handle the situation prevails in the administrative circles.

News of the dissolution reached the St. Petersburg papers late today and their latest editions, but the public were quickly informed through extras and posters set out in the streets, and all street corners, containing the ukaz announcing the dissolution and the imperial manifesto.

Little groups of readers clustered around these the whole day, attentively perusing the manifesto, the phrasing of which is calculated to appeal to the patriotism of the lower classes. Little enthusiasm or excitement, however, was evoked and even the Duke's officials, who were expected to turn away with a feeling of the deepest contempt. Though General Duffell, prefect of police, was nominally in charge, the provisions for public safety were virtually in the hands of General Hasenkamp, the aide to Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaevich. The military was disposed chiefly in the industrial section. Nobility, not even the Duke's officials, was allowed to enter the precincts of the palace. A laconic notice was posted on the gates announcing that "former deputies" would receive their salaries upon application to the chancery of the empire.

Reports were in circulation during the day that the workmen were planning a great demonstration in front of the palace, but this was not the only occasion sight-seers visited the building.

The officer in command of the troops informed the Associated Press that he had orders to disperse any crowds collecting, without pity, and not to spare the bullets in case of necessity. During the night nine of the sixteen Social Democrat leaders, specifically named in the government indictment, including Prince Tseretkoff and M. Dzhaparidze, were taken into custody. The other seven secured in eluding the elaborate provisions made for their arrest. Two secret service officers, with signed warrants, had been assigned to follow each deputy and serve the warrants as soon as the ukaz was promulgated. They were instructed to follow their men to the frontier if necessary, but the deputies succeeded in making their escape.

The following is the text of the Emperor's manifesto:
"We, Nicholas II., by the grace of God, Emperor of all the Russias, Czar of Poland, Grand Duke of Finland, etc., declare to all our faithful subjects that, in conformity with our order and instructions since the dissolution of the first Duma, our government has adopted a series of successive measures to pacify the country and establish the affairs of state in regular course."
"The second Duma, convoked by us, was summoned to contribute, according to our sovereign will, to the pacification of Russia, principally by the work of legislation, without which the life of a state and the perfection of its administration is impossible; next by an examination of the budget of revenue and expenditure which ensures regularity in national finance, and, finally by the national use of the right of addressing interpellations to the authorities to augment her troubles and assist in the disruption of the state."
"As a consequence of this activity during these periods of the Duma, which constituted an insurmountable obstacle to fruitful labor, a hostile spirit was introduced into the Duma itself which prevented the union of a sufficient number of its members desirous of working for the interests of the country. For this reason the Duma either failed to discuss important measures that were drawn up by her government or delayed their discussion or else rejected them, not even receding from rejection of laws which punished the open support of crimes."
"The Duma did not lend its moral support to the government in the restoration of order, and Russia continues to suffer the shame of an epoch of crimes and disorders."
"The examination of the budget created an obstacle to the timely satisfaction of many of the vital needs of the people. The right of interpellation was transformed by a considerable number of its members into a means of fighting against the government and creating distrust towards it among large classes of the people."
"Lastly an act was committed unheard of in the annals of history. The judicial authorities discovered a plot by a section of the Duma against the state and power of the Czar, but when our government demanded the exclusion of the members of the Duma implicated in the crime, and the arrest of those among them most complicit, the Duma failed to carry out its duty in the lawful demand of the authorities which admitted no delay."
"All this compelled us by imperial ukase to the Senate to dissolve the second Duma, fixing September 14th as the date of the convocation of the new Duma, believing, however, in the patriotism and the national spirit of our people."
"We find the cause of failure on two occasions of activity in the Duma in the fact that owing to the work of the imperfect institution was composed of members who were not truly representative of the needs and desires of the people; consequently, while leaving in force all the rights granted to our subjects by the manifesto of October 17, 1905, and the fundamental laws, we have decided to modify the procedure in electing to the Duma representatives of the section of the people who have their own representatives."
"The Duma was summoned to strengthen the Russian state and ought to be Russian in spirit. Other nationalities forming part of our empire ought to have representatives of their needs in the Duma, but they ought not to appear in the Duma as representatives of numbers as will make it possible for them to be arbiters on questions which are purely Russian."
"Within the confines of the state where the people have not attained sufficient civil development, the elections to the Duma must be temporarily suspended."
"All these electoral modifications could not have introduced in the customary legislative way by the Duma, whose composition is recognized by us to be unsatisfactory by reason of the imperfection of the procedure for the election of members of the Duma. It is only to the power which gave the first election to the Duma, the historic power of the Czar, that the historic power of the law and replacing it by a new law belongs. God has given us the power of the Czar over our people. It is before His throne we shall answer for the destinies of the Russian state. Believing that we have made the solution to carry on to the very end and the great work begun by us of the reformation of Russia."
"We give Russia a new electoral law and order its promulgation in the note. From our faithful subjects we look for united and vigorous service in the direction indicated by us for the country whose have been in all times the firm support of its strength, its greatness and its glory."
"Given at Peterhof, "NICHOLAS."

The accident occurred near Natick, where the Boston and Albany is installing a four-track system between that place and this town. A large steam crane was jacking out on the track about six inches. It missed the engine but raked the four passenger coaches, splintering all the glass on that side of the cars, and ripping the window frames. For a moment there was great excitement among the passengers, many of whom were cut and bleeding from the flying glass and splinters, but after first alarm, the cuts were found to be of a minor character.

THEIR FIRST MASS CELEBRATED HERE

In St. Peter's church yesterday morning Father Barry and Leonard, newly ordained priests, celebrated mass for the first time. Father Leonard is a native of this city and Father Barry formerly belonged to Fredericton. Father Weigel, who was rector of St. Peter's for three years, and who left this city about nine years ago, was also present and preached a very eloquent and touching sermon on the Dignity of the Priesthood. He referred to the career of Father Leonard, who felt called upon to join the order while Father Weigel was rector of the parish here. He had gone to Father Weigel for instruction and advice, and his mentor had followed his career with interest and pleasure ever since. In the evening, after vespers the newly ordained priests were each presented with a substantial purse of gold by M. D. Coll, on behalf of the Young Men's Society of St. Peter. President Coll spoke of the pleasure the members of the association had in greeting the new priests after the attainment of their ambition. Father Leonard responded briefly, thanking his former chums for their thoughtfulness and expression of friendship and good will. Father Barry also responded briefly. Father Weigel and Father Duke, rector of St. Peter's, also addressed the young men assembled, their remarks being very inspiring. During the day Father Weigel received a number of visits from his former parishioners.

Everyday Club Concert

The sacred concert in the Every Day Club Hall last evening brought together a variety of musical talent which presented a programme of the highest merit. The hall was crowded, many being unable to secure seats. Jack Walker played the piano while the audience was gathering. There were solos by Bayard Stillwell, Master Harold Colwell, Prof. Titus, Mrs. Muller, Miss Drake and Fred A. Dixon, and a duet by Messrs. Dixon and Williams. Walter Nixon gave a whistling solo, and Prof. Bowden, accompanied by Henry Turner, played a violin solo that was in itself worth visiting the hall to hear. Miss Worden played several accompaniments and other accompanists were Miss Drake and Mrs. Colwell. Mrs. Muller, who will this week join her husband in Montreal, will be much missed by musical people in St. John. The chairman at last night's concert referred to the supervised playground work this summer, for which the Every Day Club have tendered the use of the Victoria grounds, and expressed the hope that the appeal of the Woman's Council committee for aid would meet with a generous response.

WILL LOOK FOR TIN IN NOVA SCOTIA

R. W. Ellis, M.A., LL.D., F.R.S.C., geologist of the Dominion government service, and in charge of the work done by the department in the Maritime Provinces, is at the Royal. He is accompanied by Hugh Fletcher, B.A., of the same service. A. P. Low, deputy minister of mines and director of geological survey, is expected immediately and will supervise the commencement of the surveys here. J. A. Robert, who will have charge of the work in this section, is expected on Tuesday.

The geological department have in view for this summer the making of a topographical and geological survey of a district within a ten miles radius of St. John. The only existing geological map of this district was made on the scale four miles to an inch and is also being carried on around the other principal cities of Canada, and as the geological survey of the work will be extended in all directions. Mr. Robert will make his first camp at Spruce Lake. Later in the summer Dr. Ellis may himself have a camp in this district also.

Meanwhile, however, Dr. Ellis will make frequent visits here. Just now, however, Dr. Ellis is on his way to P. E. Island, where there is no surface soil, but where borings will be made. Mr. Fletcher is on his way to Cape Breton, where the coal fields there will engage his attention. A more interesting mission, however, is that of Mr. Farquhar, who will visit sections of Nova Scotia, where traces of tin are supposed to have been found. Should the metal be found in any quantity, the discovery would be very valuable and policy to have been found.
