RUSSIA LOOKS TO HER CONVICTS TO DEFEND ISLAND AGAINST JAPS

Sakhline, Off the Siberian Coast, Wanted by the Mikado, But Czar Will Make His Convicts Fight by Promise of Reduced Terms of Exile--Natives Know How to Battle--The Place Poor and Barren But Valuable.

(Special Correspondence of the Telegraph--Copyright, 1904, by John O'Laughlin) St. Petersburg, Dec. 10--Russia's penal colony of Sakhline, an island lying off the Siberian coast and a few miles north of the Japanese island of Yezo, depends for defense against Japanese invasion upon the exiles who are condemned to servitude there. That it is Japan's intention to occupy this island before the war shall end, there is no doubt in the minds of Russian officials; nor is there any doubt either that if Japan be the victor in the struggle she will require its cession as one of the terms of peace. But in order to make the demand technically justifiable, military occupation must occur, and Russia has prepared to resist strenuously any movement designed to effect it.

Already one Japanese expedition, according to Russian official accounts, has met with disaster, and as the sea is frozen it is expected that a new attack will take place during the winter. The moment Japan has definitely established her supremacy upon the sea, then Admiral Togo will be able to spare some of his ships to support military operations on Sakhline, farther to the north.

Have Clashed About It Before. The acquisition of Sakhline has been the Russian claim, one of the dreams of the Japanese. At one time, the latter were in formal possession of the lower half of the island and resented greatly the decision of the Russians in occupying the remainder. The Russian title to the northern part was based upon a treaty negotiated with China almost half a century ago, but this was not a valuable holding, and a movement to the south was begun. Frequent collisions with the Japanese, and finally, in order to remove all questions Japan consented in 1875 to cede her interests to Russia.

The advantages of this place for a convict settlement were sought by the Russian authorities. It enabled the government to give prisoners, who were condemned for the most heinous crimes, an opportunity to live in the open air, and its remoteness made escape impossible. The hardest work, of course, was in the mines, from which are obtained coal, iron and other minerals, but these not considered to this latter were allowed to live in their own little huts and till the poor soil.

The government has given them assistance, supplying implements and seed, but the rigorous climate--the temperature falls to 40 degrees below zero in winter--prevents large crops. Thus thirty-six tons of rye which were planted one season produced only seventy-eight tons at harvest. If the island is so poor, why then do the Japanese want it? Because of its fish--the Russians say, because of its fish--the waters teem with salmon, sardines and trout, and because of its valuable furs. The island would be also an outlet for some of her surplus population. Only a few thousands could establish themselves upon it, it is true, but even in view of the overcrowded state of the immigration crowded state of these would count. Besides it would round out the insular possessions of the

Yacht Mischief, Which Was Seized for Violation of Canadian Customs LIQUOR FOUND ON BOARD

Sixty Cases on Voyage from St. Pierre, (Miq.)--Charge is Failure to Enter and Clear at Several Ports Touched At.

The American yacht Mischief, which was held up in November last by Canadian Customs Officers Bourinot and Gordon at Myra Gut (C. B.), proves to be an old racing antagonist of the Canadian yachtsmen. It was the Canadian yacht which she defeated one of the American yachtsmen in 1882. It will be remembered that the Mischief put into Myra Gut after a run from St. Pierre (Miq.) and the customs authorities, being suspicious, seized her, charging that by failing to officially enter and clear at several ports she was being violated.
