THE MESSENGER THOUGHT.

BY MISS M. A. BROWN.

I send a thought to thee,
The deep unspoken essence of my love!
I send it, like a home returning dove, Far over land and sea,
Ah, shall it reach thee? shall it find a rest, Beloved one! in thy breast?

I send it forth with all The winged and burning power the lightning hath Through night, and storm, and tempest in its path; Ah, shall its radiance fall Upon thy soul, and wake a thrilling start Of memory in thy heart?

I send it—a full glance
From the soul's eye, that shall, without a word, Cause all thy spirit into love stirred; Then bring a magic trance—A momentary spell of deep delight Upon thy most to-night.

'Tis gone, doth it not reach With its swift flight its destined haven now?
Doth it not whisper blessing, truth, and vow,
In its own wordless speech?
Doth not its viewless stress thy thoughts compel Even now with me to dwell?

I will believe the dream—Will fancy I can rule thy heart with mine, That I have power on that high soul of thine—Though vain the vision seem To those who know not how my very thought Is with mine image fraught.

Ah, could that thought return!
Return and bring some record of its stay!
Vain hope! it loves too dearly to delay Where ere my full heart doth yearn, Even unto acting, at this hour to be With thee, beloved! with thee.

Miscellaneous Extracts.

Death of Miss Bathurst.—It appears that Miss Bathurst, who was residing at Rome under the protection of her uncle and aunt, Lord and Lady Aylmer, rode out with them, escorted by the French Ambassador, the Duc de Laval Montmorenci. The groom by Miss Bathurst was sent back to the residence of Lord Aylmer, with some message; and when the party arrived near the Point de Molle, the Duke proposed leading them by a path which he had often ridden, along the bank of the Tiber. The river having become swollen, portions of the bank had given way, which had rendered the path so narrow that, after pursuing it some short distance, the Duke, who was foremost, proposed retracing their steps. In endeavouring to turn her horse, Miss Bathurst unfortunately back-did him too near the edge of the bank, and the horse and rider were plunged into the river. Not one of the party could swim; nevertheless, Lord Aylmer attempted to rush into the water, and had advanced some paces when his distracted wife held him forcibly back. What renders this sad catastrophe still more lamentable is that the groom who had been sent back to Rome is a good swimmer, and might have been able to rescue this charming young girl from a watery grave.

ROYAL HUMANITY SOCIETY.—The anniversary of this praiseworthy association was celebrated on Thursday, at the Freemasons' Tavern Great Queen Street. His R. H. the Duke of Cambridge presided. About 150 gentlemen sat down to dinner. The cloth being removed the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were duly honoured. An interesting procession then entered the hall, consisting of above twenty persons, each carrying a Bible,—men, women and children, who had been rescued from drowning and from the very gates of death through the medium of the Society's agents. Their appearance produced a deep impression of the society's usefulness. The medals of the society were then presented by the royal chairman to the individuals to whom they had been awarded. Their names were—1. William Darling and George Darling, his daughter, whose heroic conduct is well known to the public.—2 Alexander McIntyre, who saved five fellow-travellers from drowning when the ferry-boat in which he was, in August 1837.—3. The Rev.
James Aylton, Vicar of St. Nicholas, who, after two or three unsuccessful efforts, succeeded in saving Alfred Banks, who had fallen into the river at Hale Weston.—4. F. H. Stevens, mate of H. M. ship Rodney, who, when James Ray, seaman, fell from the main-top-sail yardarm into the sea, on the cry being raised of "A man overboard," without waiting to take off his clothes, jumped over the side of the vessel, and, after great exertion, succeeded in saving him, after he had fallen into a state of insensibility.—5. Capt. Crow, of the steam-packet Lord Melville, who, when Mr. W.

Youatt had fallen over the quay at Calais, in a dark tempestuous night, plunged from the pier into the water, grasped the drowning man, and rescued him from a watery grave.—6.
John Stephens, mate of H. M. ship Inconstant, who dived and succeeded, after much danger and difficulty, in bringing an insensible man to the surface of the water, and, in the face of a strong tide, managed to support him till a boat came to their relief.—7. Thomas Stephen Copping, Esq., who, when a female had fallen over a bridge at Cook, threw himself over the parapet wall, and seized her as she was about to disappear under the archway.— The evening was enlivened by the professional exertions of Messrs. Fitzwilliam, Bellamy, Hawes, &c. The band of the Coldstream Guards was also in attendance. The subscriptions amounted to upwards of £700.

INFAMOUS HOAX.—On Saturday morning, from two till five o'clock, the family of Captain Wybrow, in Grove street, Camden town, were kept in continual annoyance by the arrival of upwards of twenty physicians, who had been hoaxed by representations that they were required to attend Captain Wybrow with all possible speed.

By the will of the Earl of Essex, we understand that, deducting a jointure of £5000 per annum, secured to the Countess (late Miss Stephens), together with the Cashbury park, and the house in Belgrave square, the whole of his property devolves upon the heir at-law, his Lordship's nephew, Arthur Capel, now Earl of Essex.

LONGEVITY OF THE HOUSE OF PEERS.— There are thirteen Peers, whose united ages make upwards of 1000, viz:—Lords Lytton, 89; Rolle, 88; Fortescue, 86; Abergavenny, 84; Manners, 84; Leicester, 84; Arden, 83; Sidmouth, 82; Lonsdale, 82; Limerick, 81; Camden, 80; and Westmoreland, 80.

It is said to be the intention of the directors of the London and Birmingham and Grand Junction Railway Companies to increase the speed of the mail trains on their lines of railway, so that the distance between Manchester and Liverpool and London shall be accomplished in nine hours.

The total amount of silver coined and delivered into the mint, from the 5th April, 1837 to 31st January, 1839, was $240,000, and of copper for the same period, $7,010.

Madame Tagliani is expected to arrive in England on the 15th of this month. The new ballot to welcome this celebrated danseuse is to be called La Gaetana-Musical World.

The Sporting Magazine has given a portrait of two carrier pigeons that were bred in Hertfordshire, educated at first to fly short distances, and then trusted to make longer flights, until they accomplished the astonishing feat of returning from Haverfordwest, in Wales, a distance of 265 miles in eight hours.

Dr. Lowe, the great Prussian Orientalist, has written a grammar and dictionary in the Circassian language. He also composed a grammar of the Arabian language. He has lately acquired the Turkish language, being the twenty-fifth language which he has obtained.

It is stated in a foreign paper, that on last Good Friday, the Emperor and Empress of Austria, performed the annual custom of washing the feet of twelve poor men, and as many poor women. The aggregate ages of the men amounted to 1061 years. The eldest was 104, and the youngest 83. The eldest of the females was 89, and the youngest 84.
