

Adde Headed Women Fascinated with Wigs and Paint. It is hard to understand why it is but somehow, while girls recognize the powder and paint, the blonde wig and powdered front of a prima donna, she has to be up, they refuse to analyze the charms of a tress, and his grace paint, luxuriant locks and graceful limbs are admired as his very own. Unluckily these fascinating young women have no opportunity of seeing the adored object as she sits at the family table, devoting herself to her duties, with three small children at his knee, and a wife reading aloud to the young ones.

BRIC-A-BRAC.

Spotted Tall's Joke. One day Captain Lee was talking with Spotted Tall and others about honest people, and he kept on saying "There's no such thing as an honest man," said the captain, jokingly. "There used to be, however. In former times honest men were the palm of the day. I will tell you a story of a man who was as honest as the palm of his hand. He had a few hundred in his hand."

What a Boy Can Do. An inquiring and anxious boy of 19 writes the editor of a good morning paper for advice as to what to do. "I am the son of a poor man, and I am very poor. I have no money, and I am very poor. I have no money, and I am very poor. I have no money, and I am very poor."

What She Called Him. A well known schoolmaster writes for the truth of the following: A teacher in a lower grade in one of our public schools received a letter from a parent, who had been the domestic life of the teacher's father and his wife. The letter was very kind and complimentary, and the teacher was very pleased. He was very pleased. He was very pleased. He was very pleased.

Not Extraordinary. The following story is told of a Scotch sailor at Gibraltar. He was one day on guard with another officer who unfortunately fell from the wall. The sailor was very surprised. He was very surprised. He was very surprised. He was very surprised.

The Latest Slang Words. Quite a lot of new slang has been opened up for trade. This is nearly altogether family slang for the use of ladies, and if they wish to be in the fashion, they must use it. It is very interesting. It is very interesting. It is very interesting. It is very interesting.

Remember the Orphans. At eight o'clock the other morning a wife followed her husband down to the gate as he was starting down road and said to him: "William, you know how badly I need a blue burning dress. Will you buy me one?"

The Crooked Course of Love. Five years ago a maiden fair, whose home was a little town near Macou, Ga., anxiously awaited the return of her lover. He had been away for five years. He had been away for five years. He had been away for five years.

Why Men Sit at the End of a Pew. It is curious to look down the aisle of a full church and at the end of every pew a man. Very seldom, indeed, does a woman sit at the end of a pew. Why? There is a reason for that as for every other phenomenon.

The Parson's Successor. Two new fashions are heralded in the city of fashion. The first is a new style of dress. The second is a new style of dress. The third is a new style of dress. The fourth is a new style of dress.

THE LIME KILN CLUB.

"Don't seek to make angels of yourselves," quietly began Brother Gardner as the meeting opened. "In the first place I am not sort of an angel, and in the second place you would be much more likely to be made of mud than of clay."

BRIGHT CHILDREN.

From the Brooklyn Eagle. It was a little three year old girl, when a carpenter had been called in to see the work. She was standing by the door, and she was looking at the carpenter. She was looking at the carpenter. She was looking at the carpenter.

The sun was just peeping over the Wahrago, the east and living the peaks of the west range with its snow-capped summits, rolled up to the door of the old hotel in the Village of American Fork. There were three of us in the party—Al Forbes, a well known western journalist, who closed his eyes upon death at Bent's Mountain, Neb., about five years since, only leaving a few lines of a remembrance of an eastern newspaper, and the husband of the author of this sketch. For five hours we had tramped about in the brush on the road down from Salt Lake City, and when the driver drew up his steaming steed, with a "good morning" from the driver, we were met by a man who was a stranger to us.

"Welcome, gentlemen and la— But I perceive you are not honored with the company of ladies. Welcome, gentlemen, welcome to my home. Come in and take hold just as if you owned the place. Let me take your valises, sir. Tony (to the driver), untie the gentleman's trunk from the foot of the horse, and help you to get it. In this way, gentlemen, if you please."
