THE GLEANER, FREDERICTON, N. B., THURSDAY, JANUARY 10.

I do not see the pain my light words give;
The quivering, shrinking heart I cannot see;
So, light of thought, midst hidden griefs I live,
And mock the cypressed tombs with slightes
glee;
Open my eyes, light, blessed ways to find—
Jesus, have mercy on me, I am blind.

have been rumors that Dr. Berryman had tendered his resignation, but well-informed persons know that he had not done this, although he had made strong remonstrances to the leader against the way his representations were treated As far as the matter is understood, Tr. Berryman—with whom his collesgue, Dr. Alward, is known to be in harmony—has the support of a great majority in the community, as the well understood wishes of the people, as expressed through their representatives, should have just weight with the administration.

Among other things, a certain rocky crag needed to be planted with trees, and the care live the grim barrenness of its appearance. The question was how to do it, as it was impossible for any man to dim the carg, in order to set seed or planted with trees, and the care in the clefts of the rock.

A happy idea struck my father. Howing observed in front of the eastle a pair of small cannon, used for firing salutes on great days, it occurred to him to turn them to account.

A tinsmith in the village was or dered to make a number of canisters were filled with all sorts of suitable tree seeds. The cannon was loaded, and the canisters were fired up against the high face of the rock. They burst, and scattered the seed in all directions. Some years after, when my father revisited the place, he was delighted to find that his scheme of planting by a tillery had proved completely successful; the trees were flourishing luxuriantly in all the recesses of the diff.—Youth's Companion.

A veritable Living Liliputian Unnerves a New York limiter.

A prominent Eighth avenue hatter was surprisingly made aware that a very little thing at times causes a great deal of commotion in this hustling world. He was cozily seated in his palatial hat repository and carefully engaged in scrutinizing the eglumns of The Evening Sun, when a gentleman entered and asked to see some hats. The latest thing in sik tiles was shown to him. He tried one on. It did not exactly suit his fancy, however, and the proprietor placed several offset was placed in the construction of that portion of the line hing between Harvey Station and Moneton or Salisbury via Fredericton be carried out.

Neither colored goods nor flannels should be boiled.

All goods in barrels—apples, beef, potatoes, etc.—keep better when laid down on their side.

Soda should never be used for flannels, and it they are to be kept in good condition they should be neither mangled nor ironed.

An Englishman sends to an English mewspaper the following remarks on a vexed international question: "An American says 'sir' five hundred times where an Englishman says it once. Why? This is an Americans, but really nothing more than a survival of old fashioned English courtesy. Dr. Johnson, even in addressing his intimate 'Bozzy,' continually repeated 'sir.' Here, Americans are more polite than English people. It is surely better to erron the right side through excess of courtesy than to address our acquaint-ances like dogs. We owe gratitude to Americans for setting us a good example, here, at least, as some compensation for the havoe played with our language in other respects." This observation is not only acute but accurate. Educated Englishmen in the last entury addressed their friends and equals as "sir," nearly if not quite as often as Americans do today. In England this form of address is now seldom used except toward superiors, seldom used except toward superiors, seldom used except toward superiors, and inferior who has incurred the spaces of an inferior who has incurred the spaces of displeasure.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Several nights ago Col. Jerry Spillers, of Kentucky, went to see Coquelin, at McVicker's theatre. The colonel had never heard of the great French to comedian, and expected to see a performance something after the style of the minstrel shows which visit country towns. The Kentuckian secured a seat near the stage, and, shortly after the performance began, began, in an

A Dangerous Drug.

If one-half of what the doctors are saying all over the country is true, there may soon be a greater need of a temperance reform among the women than there has ever been among the men. Strong drink, however, is not the monster by which the women may be enslaved, but a strong and poisonous drug equally baneful in its effect.

This drug is antipyrine. The chemical name for it is "dimethylozyquimzini," but as it is rather long and might not be easily pronounced by ladies who are not orthographical experts, it has been called simple antipyrine, and appears as such in the medical books.

It is a white powder, slightly bitter and soluble in water. Until about a year ago it was prescribed for fevers only, but a French medical college recommended it for headaches and other pains and disorders, and in this way it has gained its grasp on so many thoughtless and nervous women.

I would receive my sight; my clouded eyes
Miss the glad radiance of the norming sun,
The changing tints that glorify the skids
With reseate splendors when the day is done;
The shadows soft and gray, the penry light
Of summer twilight deep ning into night.
