CHAPTER XXIV.
Home.

It was nearly dark in the sick-room, and as Mrs. Jeffrey had just gone out, and Theo. in the parlor below, was enjoying a quiet talk with her husband, Madam Conway was quite alone. For a time she lay thinking of Margaret, then her thoughts turned upon George and his "amazing proposition." "Such unheard of insolence!" she exclaimed, and she was proceeding further with her soliloquy when a peculiar noise upon the stairs without caught her ear, and, raising herself upon her elbow, she listened intently to the sound which came nearer and nearer, and seemed like some one creeping slowly, painfully, for she could hear at intervals a long drawn breath, or groan, and with a vague feeling of uneasiness she awaited anxiously the appearance of the visitor; nor waited long, for the half-closed door swung slowly back, and through the gathering darkness the shape came crawling in, over the threshold, into the room, toward the corner, its limbs distorted and bent, its white hair sweeping the floor. With a smothered cry, Madam Conway hid beneath the bed clothes, looking cautiously out at the singular object, which came creeping on until the bed was reached. It touched the counterpane, it was struggling to regain its feet, and with a scream of horror the terrified woman cried out "Fiend, why are you here?" while a faint voice replied, "I am looking for Margaret. I thought she was in bed; and rising up from her crouching posture, Hagar Warren stood face to face with the woman she had so long deceived.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female illness are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 30-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

promised compliance, and then, herself bewildered, listened to the carriage as it rolled away; it seemed so like a dream that the woman, who three hours before could scarcely speak aloud, had now started for a ride of many miles in the damp night air! But love can accomplish miracles, and it made the eccentric lady strong, buoying up her spirits, and prompting her to cheer on the coachman, until just as the dawn grew rosy in the east Leonminster appeared in view. The house was found, the carriage steps let down, and then with a slight trembling in her limbs, Madam Conway alighted and walked up the gravelled path, casting eager, searching glances around and commenting as follows:

"Everything is in good taste; they must be somebody, these Warners. I'm glad it is no worse." And with each new indication of refinement in Margaret's relatives, the disgrace seemed less and less in the mind of the proud Englishwoman.

The ringing of the bell brought down Janet, who with an inquisitive look at the satin hood and bundle of shawls, ushered the stranger into the parlor, and then went for her mistress. Taking the card her servant brought, Mrs. Warner read with some little trepidation the name "Madam Conway, Hillside." From what she had heard, she was not predisposed in the lady's favor; but curious to know why she was there at this early hour, she hastened the making of the toilet, and went down to the parlor where Madam Conway sat, coiled in one corner of the sofa, which she had satisfied herself was covered with brocade, as were also the chair within the room. The tables of rose wood and marble, and the expensive curtains had none of them escaped her notice, and in a mood which more common furniture would never have produced, Madam Conway arose to meet Mrs. Warner, who received her politely, and then waited to hear her errand.

It was told in a few words. She had come for Margaret—Margaret Margret whom she had loved for eighteen years, and could not now cast off, even though she were not of the Conway and Davenport extraction.

"I can easily understand how painful must have been the knowledge that Maggie was not your own," returned Mrs. Warner, "for she is a girl of whom any one might be proud; but you are laboring under a mistake—Henry is not her brother. And then, very briefly, she explained the matter to Madam Conway, who, having heard so much, was now surprised at nothing, and who felt, it may be, a little gratified in knowing that Henry was, after all, nothing to Margaret save the husband of her sister. But a terrible disappointment awaited her. "Margaret was not there," and so loud were her lamentations, that some time elapsed ere Mrs. Warner could make her listen while she explained that "Mr. Carrollton had found Maggie the day previous at the Falls, that they were probably in Albany now, and would reach Hillside that very day;" such at least, was the import of the telegram which Mrs. Warner had received the evening before. "They wish to surprise you, undoubtedly," she said "and consequently have not telegraphed you."

This seemed probable, and, forgetting her weariness, Madam Conway resolved upon leaving John to drive home at leisure, while she took the Leonminster cars, which reached Worcester.

center in time for the upward train. This matter adjusted, she tried to be quiet; but her excitement increased each moment, and when at last breakfast was served she did but little justice to the tempting viands which her hostess set before her. Margaret's chamber was visited next, and very lovingly she patted and smoothed the downy pillows, for the sake of the bright bed which had rested there, while to herself she whispered abstractedly, "Yes, yes," though to what she was giving her assent she could not tell. She only knew that she was very happy, and very impatient to be gone, and when at last she did go, it seemed to her an agreeable Worcester was reached.

Resolutely turning her head away, lest she should see the scene of the disaster, when last she was in the city, she walked up and down the ladies' room, her satin hood and heavy broche shawl, on that warm July morning, attracting much attention. But little did she care. "Margaret was the burden of her thoughts, and the appearance of Mrs. Douglas herself would scarcely have disturbed her. Much less, then, did the presence of a queerly-dressed young girl who, entering the car with her, occupied from necessity the same seat, feeling herself a little annoyed at being thus obliged to sit so near on whom she mentally pronounced "mighty unsociable," for not once did Madam Conway turn her face that way, so intent was she upon watching their apparent speed, and counting the number of miles they had come.

Prescription 'A.'

Is the one and only genuine preparation that cures Indigestion and Dyspepsia in all its forms.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear a person say: "Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness, and headache. I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself, and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of the stomach after eating, that is (if I am able to eat). My heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion, and I am just as tired when rising in the morning (even worse) than when retiring at night. I often awake in my sleep and imagine that I am going to suffocate, and very often afraid to go to sleep again. I have to take particular good care of what food I eat. All these symptoms make my life not worth living."

So, why do you insist on suffering from all these unnecessary symptoms when STAFFORD'S "Prescription 'A'" will do the work.

This genuine preparation is manufactured by DR. E. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld.
