Foch's Preparations.

SIX WEEKS OF SUCCESS.

The news of the Allies' steady advance in every part of the battle-front north and south of the Somme is met by the German experts with the excuse that their line has not been broken through. It is cold comfort, for the German Staff must know that there has so far been no attempt at a break-through. Marshal Foch has always discouraged premature attacks. His strategy, as outlined in his works, is to exhaust the enemy, weaken his will, and shake his moral by a series of preliminary actions. Only after this careful preparation is the decisive blow delivered. What we have witnessed during the past six weeks is the preparation for such an attack and not the attack itself. There is no sign that the preparation is over or nearly over. Yet it has been so skilfully managed that it has already brought most important results. Strategic points such as Soissons, Chateau-Thierry, Montdier, Albert, Noyon, Chaumont, Bapaume, Peronne and Kemmel have been recovered. Without heavy casualties to the Allied Armies Marshal Foch has taken from the enemy nearly 130,000 prisoners and 2,000 guns. He has struck a rude blow at the reputation of the German Staff and has correspondingly enhanced Allied confidence in his leadership. There is evidence that his successes are having a marked influence in the Balkans and Near East. After the preparation has been carried to the desired point, Marshal Foch's plan as laid down by himself, is to throw in at the finish without any idea of saving them for future use, all available reserves in an engagement surpassing in violence and energy all the earlier phases of the battle. In this onslaught there must be three factors—surprise, mass and speed. It is for such a climax that the world must prepare. The British and French Armies are doing the preparatory work. The main force of the American Army, now nearly 1,500,000 strong, has been held carefully in reserve, and it is an instrument admirably designed for a decisive blow—strong in numbers and in moral and perfectly fresh. The Germans are known to be making what counter-preparations they can against the decisive stroke. They

What About These Coal Shares?

The opportunity is a good one. $25,000.00 worth of stock has been placed on the market, and to the purchaser of each one of these shares three extra shares are given free of cost. This makes the purchaser of each one dollar share the owner of four fully paid up shares in the company. The company also guarantees that none of the above shares will be subject to any further call. The opportunity to invest is open to everybody. Get busy before it is too late; no bonus shares will be given after the present allotment is disposed of. You can't lose. Invest to-day. For every single dollar you invest in this proposition you get four 1 dollar shares in return. THE ST. GEORGE'S COAL FIELDS, LTD., Cabot Bldg., 262 Water St. SEPT.17.

Stabbing on Board Ship.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 25.—A fight on a ship at the terminals early yesterday evening resulted in the stabbing of one member of the crew by another sailor on the same ship. The man was seriously injured and is not yet out of danger. The sight of one eye is permanently lost. News of the affray was telephoned into the police station and Detective Coyler and Officer Reyno immediately went to the terminals. They found the wounded man nearly unconscious and sweating in blood. He had one deep cut in his arm, one in his back, and one eye was nearly gashed out. Dr. Forrest was summoned and the victim of the sailor's anger was taken in the ambulance to the Victoria General Hospital. His life is now hanging in the balance. After a thorough investigation Coyler and Reyno arrested a man named John Frederickson. The exact details of the fight are not yet known. Some of the sailors were sitting around a table in one of the cabins. They say that an argument sprang up between Frederickson and his victim, which terminated by the former drawing his knife and leaping upon the other man. He made good use of his knife, as the wounds inflicted bear witness. Frederickson, who is a Finn, is held upon the charge of inflicting grievous bodily harm, pending any developments in the condition of his victim. Two members of the crew were also arrested and are being held as material witnesses.

"Never Again."

(From the New York Times.) But "this agony must not be gone through with again." For the Allies that affirmation of President Wilson's will be the foundation principle of the negotiations. The sufficient safeguards are plain to the view of all the world. A peace that left Germany master of the East would be a crime against ourselves and our posterity. Over the lands of the Near East and the whole of the old Empire of the Czars, she can be permitted to have no dominion. Control of vast regions where she could renew her now diminished might she must once and for all time renounce. The restorations and reparations to be decreed in the West are equally indispensable, but reiteration has made them familiar. It is in the East that the new danger will arise, there with iron resolution it must be destroyed. En- sep24, eod. t tering a conference with definite instructions to yield no point that would leave Germany in a position to call to her armies and their support the men and the resources of the boundless Eastern lands she now holds in thrall, the delegates of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and their co-belligerents may meet the representatives of the Central Powers without arousing among anxious peoples at home the fear that they are about to barter away the soul of the Allied cause.
