Moustaches Forbidden.

Orders regarding moustaches have been issued by the Bank of England. The bank has issued an order forbidding its clerks to wear moustaches during the war. This remarkable order has been issued by the bank of England, which is a leading firm of drapery and haberdashery. The bank has refused to employ any man who has a moustache, and those who have been employed have been asked to shave. The bank has extended the order to its branches in all parts of the world. The bank has a long history of being a leading firm of drapery and haberdashery. The bank has been in existence since 1855, and has a reputation for being a leading firm of drapery and haberdashery. #### Four-Footed Heroes.

The splendid work performed by dogs during the war is deserving of special record and recognition. In the early months of 1917, a war dog school of instruction was formed by the War Office, and Lieutenant-Col. Richardson, who has devoted his life to training dogs for military and police purposes, was appointed commandant. Gamekeepers, hunt servants, and shepherds were called upon from the Army to train the dogs. At first the dog recruits came entirely from homes for lost dogs, and many a poor stray animal, himself saved from the lethal chamber, has saved the life of a brave soldier. The police sent many unclaimed dogs, and finally the public, in answer to an appeal, helped generously. It is only fitting that those who gave their dogs should know that they have been the means of saving countless lives and much property. Dogs have been used as messengers, sentries, and watchers. Their skill, courage, and tenacity have been amazing. During the heavy barrage when all other communication have been cut, the messenger dogs have made their way, and in many cases have brought messages of vital importance. Sometimes they have been wounded in the performance of their duties, and there is a wonderful record of the determination with which wounded dogs have persisted in their duty. They have often brought a message in a few minutes over ground that would take a runner hours to cross.

Brussels Under the Hun.

During the occupation of Brussels by the Huns old corks sold for 3d. and 4d. each, empty tins for 1d. and 2d. each, old linen, leather trunks, old clothes, books and furniture brought a high price and as much as possible was sold by the Belgians because they never knew what would be seized by their tormentors. Those same tormentors paid £20 for an oriental carpet four feet square that cost £40 in 1880 and had been in constant use. They also paid 1,800 francs for a piano which cost 1,400 francs eleven years before. Other similar purchases were made with the intention of selling the articles later on—doubtless bearing the magic words "made in Germany." Wonderful dyes were to be obtained easily in Brussels and during the past summer Belgian ladies dyed their sheets according to fancy and wore them. Last winter their spare blankets were transformed into coats. For a while the Belgians were hoaxed into wearing their own patriotic emblems which had been manufactured by the Hun and put on sale in Brussels. But as soon as the hoax was discovered Belgians refused to avail themselves of the privilege of buying German-made goods. A flint and steel for lighting the gas, although clever, was unsaleable, the reason being that it was made by the Huns. Brass water taps were taken by the enemy and for these they paid two francs fifty, charging six francs for taps to replace the requisitioned ones. The new ones were of course, "made in Germany." Door handles and bell pulls were seized in the same way but were not replaced by houseowners. It became "all the style" to hang a piece of firewood to the wall wire. Houses were constantly searched for everything that could be used in manufacturing ammunition, choice furniture was seized as well as elegant or luxurious clothing—all sent to Germany as loot. During this time there was no communication with the outside world—only such letters and news as the Hun chose to allow. It is scarcely conceivable that France and Belgium are even now filled with war's victims who are hearing for the first time of what has been happening outside their own little environment during the awful five years just closed.—Canadian Directory of Public Information.

New Industry Really Old

To most persons the spinning and knitting of dog's wool seemed to be an outgrowth of the necessities of this war. But it appears that twenty years ago Princess Victoria had the combing of her pet brown spaniel spun into yarn by the Sandringham Village Industry and the Princess herself knitted the wool into a brown shawl for herself. It was at Sandringham also that the first Borzoi wool was spun, King Edward making the suggestion and clipping the first sample from his famous Borzoi Alex for the test. Twenty years before that the hair of St. Bernards was knitted into mittens and mufflers, and ten years earlier poodles' wool was spun and woven into cloth that is to-day as good as when first made up although the cap has been worn ever since. A waistcoat knitted from the wool of skelteries has been worn constantly for two winters and shows no sign of its service. Even the hair of Persian cats has been spun into the loveliest wool by the British Dogs' Wool Association. The wire-haired dogs have proven themselves real war workers, also, for their combings make ideal filling for pillows for wounded limbs. There is every prospect that the spinning of dog's wool can and will be developed as a national handicraft since much of the spinning can be done in country homes and no doubt in these same places there will develop some interesting work in weaving and knitting. One very important consideration is the fact that the yarn is practically indestructible and of delightful texture, thus giving every encouragement to careful designing of patterns in weaving.—Canadian Directory of Public Information.

Houses Without Nails.

In Alberta, Canada, there exists a village where, as a matter of fact, no nails have been used in the construction of the houses. These were built by Ruthenian immigrants, and are of the typical Ruthenian style—long, pitch-roofed, thatched, and wide in the eaves. Even the door, an affair of slender twigs, woven and laced together, swings on home-made hinges, and is
