HUNGARY FEARS FIGHTING.

BUDAPEST, March 30. Fears were expressed here that a sanguinary conflict might break out between supporters and opponents of former Emperor Charles, now at Ste. Inanager castle near the Austrian frontier, guarded by General Lehar, who is reported to have fifteen thousand royalist troops under his command. BUDAPEST, March 30. Count Stefan Beldien, fully empowered to act for safety of state as plenipotentiary of regent Horthy, has been sent to Ste. Inanager where former Emperor Charles has taken refuge after his vain attempt to regain the throne. Premier Teleky and Count Julius Andrássy, former Foreign Minister and friend of the former ruler accompanied Count Beldien to endeavour to persuade Charles to leave Hungary immediately.

MISLED BY MONARCHISTS.

LONDON, March 30. British official circles expressed the opinion to-day that the former Emperor Charles in his attempt to regain the throne of Hungary was misled by the Monarchists who advised him that the time was ripe for his return to Hungary. The advice of regent Horthy to Charles to leave the country immediately, is regarded here as substantiating the view that there is no support for a Monarchist coup in Hungary at present. The Hungarian regent

VIENNA, March 30.

The entire Austrian-Hungarian frontier has been closed by joint action of the two Governments pending final disposition of former Emperor Charles. Canada's Navy.

It is altogether fitting that Canada should be given the nucleus of a national navy, now that peace has been finally won at the point of the sword. A Canadian navy, manned and officered by Canadians, will foster among all Canadians a commendable pride in their national achievement. It will at the same time serve as a guarantee of the rights of Canadian merchant ships on the high seas. An efficient and well-trained Canadian navy, however small in size, will always be a valuable addition to the British Imperial Navy. Its creation should, therefore, be endorsed both by the British Admiralty and the British people. A Canadian navy can never endanger the peace of the world, nor menace the liberties of mankind.—Boston Transcript.

The Painter of "The Last Muster."

Sir Hubert Herkomer, who died at Budleigh Salterton, Devon, in the evening of March 31, 1914, in his 65th year, was born at Wals, Bavaria, and became famous as a painter. He was elected A.R.A. in 1879, and a loyal Academician in 1890, being knighted in 1879. He was also a member of various foreign academies, and professor of fine arts at Oxford for nine years. Among the many distinctions conferred upon him was the French Grand Medal of Honour, presented at Paris in 1878, for his famous picture, "The Last Muster." The distinguished artist had a great affection for East Devon towns, and presented his picture, "The Tryal," to Exeter Art Gallery. He painted everybody of importance, and had many stories to tell of his sitters. When he went to paint Tennyson the poet received him by saying, "I hate you coming. I cannot abide sitting," but after the first sitting, when Sir Hubert had gone to bed, Tennyson went into his room as though to make amends and said, "I believe you are honest. Good-night," and departed as abruptly as he came. When Wagner was in England, introducing his music he saw young Herkomer every day, but always postponed sitting to him. Afterwards Sir Hubert settled down and painted a portrait of the musician in two days without a sitting. This portrait is now in the National Portrait Gallery. When Wagner saw it he said, "It is witchcraft. I like to look like that." Sir Hubert was interested in music, composing many operas, and later in life took a great joy in writing and producing cinematograph plays, in which he himself had a chief part. His house, "Lululand," at Bushey, Hertfordshire, was after his own design, and was more like a mediaeval castle than a modern dwelling. Here he founded the famous Herkomer School of Art. He was honoured by all the great European academies, and was Slade Professor of Fine Arts at Oxford for nine years. In the world of literature he became known by "The Kerkomers," a delightful work on his family and himself.

An Ill-Omened Beginning.

Lord Camden, the new Viceroy of Ireland, arrived in Dublin on March 31, 1795, his Chief Secretary—Pelham—having been there for some days; the state of the country was so dangerous that there were great fears for the safety of the Viceroy on his entry into Dublin. In consequence, it is said, of secret information furnished by Francis Higgins, the proprietor of the "Freeman's Journal," the arrangements for the entry were at the last moment changed, and it was deemed a matter of small consequence that the procession passed almost unmolested through the streets. When Lord Fitzgibbon and the Primate were returning from the Castle, their carriages were attacked by a furious mob, and the Chancellor—who was especially obnoxious to the popular party—was wounded by a stone which struck him on the forehead. The riot spread rapidly, the mob attacking the Custom House, the Primate, the Speaker, and Beresford; and it was found necessary to call out the soldiers; two men being killed. It was indeed an ill-omened beginning of a disastrous vicereignty.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 PER CENT. AIR. Beats Electric or Gas.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise--no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal-oil).

Did He?

An inspector of schools was asked by the squire to dinner. During the meal (it is Sir Ernest Wild, K.C., who tells the story) the squire asked him if he had any amusing experiences. "Yes," replied his guest. "I was taking a class of small boys in the subject of general knowledge. I asked, somewhat abruptly, 'Who wrote "Hamlet"?' A small boy held up a trembling hand and stammered out, 'Please, sir, I didn't!'"

After the ladies had retired the squire moved his seat so as to sit next the inspector, and said, "About that story--I suppose the little beggar did, didn't he?"
