The Leaves.

Wailed among the trees in the autumn wind. The leaves were in their brightest colors, as if for a holiday.

Wailed in this wonderful tempest of heavy, the south wind moved the branches and countless leaves of these leaves fell to the ground. A shower of love. There was sadness even in their falling! They seemed to nod to each other in a glad, playful way before they descended with cheering to the ground. It was the falling of the leaves that was the sign that autumn had come.

I knew that each little leaf had a quiet grave somewhere in the soil. Going to a grave in the autumn, and in the garden of life. It was the falling of the leaves that was the sign that autumn had come.

Oh, child of faith! Walk not with bowed head among the trees! Rather, look up in hope! The risen Christ still lives. And death is but the road, winding among autumn tinted trees, through the shadow land—to the life that is His and yours.

Safe Medical Advice.

The doctor had left his instructions sufficient to carry on during his absence through the afternoon. All went well till the 'phone rang and a sweet feminine voice enquired, "Is the doctor in? May I speak to him?" The assistant, per instructions, explained the doctor's absence and inquired if he could be of any use. The lady caller's voice was worried as she went on.

Britain Renders Homage.

TO THOSE WHO GAVE THEIR LIVES

LONDON, Nov. 11.—With solemnity that is heightened rather than diminished by the passage of years, Great Britain to-day rendered homage to those who "gave the most that man can give—life itself." In the Great War.

silence. Even at the cenotaph in Whitehall, the heart of the Empire, the proceedings were of the most simple manner. The King, representing the nation, laid a wreath on the memorial to the silent sons of Britain. The ministry, representatives of the army, navy and the dominions, paid similar tribute, and then the people, coming in a great pilgrimage through Whitehall, placed their offerings about the memorial.

Throughout the day thousands passed in a constant stream by the tomb of the Unknown Warrior in Westminster Abbey.

This was poppy day, too, and millions wore the little symbols, recalling the poppies that grew in Flanders fields, "between the crosses, row on row."

The money received from the sale of the little flowers will go to help the ex-service men and their dependents.

After Childbirth

The depression and nerve fatigue suffered by women blots out interest in everything.

Light Wears Out Clothes Out.

There is nothing more destructive to clothing than strong sunlight. Cotton and wool fibers are very tough and elastic. They will withstand rubbing and twisting to a surprising degree. Rain and the air affect them very little. Yet exposure to a week's sunshine will cause them to become harsh and brittle so that they could easily break and wear.

If worn in the dark, an ordinary suit of clothes would last at least ten years. But sunlight weakens a fabric according to its color. A dark cloth retains its strength longer than one tinted with red, green or yellow.

Not all dress materials are affected alike by sunshine. Woolen fabrics wear out faster than cotton. This partly explains why woolen cloth fades less rapidly than a cotton fabric of the same color. When sunlight acts on a colored woolen cloth, the cloth suffers first and thereby partly protects the dye. In cotton materials the sunlight ruins the dye first.

Non-Sanctity of Marriage.

Next to Japan, the United States is the worst nation in the world as far as the sacredness with which the people regard the matrimonial ties is concerned, said Bishop Walter T. Summer, of Oregon, who is visiting Chicago. "Modern marriages are virtually nothing more than trial marriages," he declared, "and the United States is in danger of becoming the most dissolute nation in the world."
