

PLEASURE PLEASES GRAND AUDIENCES

Burlesque Combines Little of Everything To Produce
Real Entertainment.

Pleasure, at the Grand Theatre, is a burlesque gem. The show is not constructed on any one line, but is a happy combination, presenting a little of everything that might be offered for the amusement and entertainment of theatre-goers. Principals of genuine merit, comedians above the average and a chorus of vivacious young ladies of both charm and ability are reinforced by scenic lighting effects and original ideas that are combined pleasantly and effectively.

Receptive pleasure on the part of the audience and apparent pleasure on the part of the company at the evidence of sincerity with which the production was greeted, featured the opening performance and indicated favor not accorded any show of recent weeks.

The comedy, always essential to burlesque, is ably handled by two veterans in this line, Fred "Falls" Binder and Bob Snyder. Their lines are original and strictly humorous, and they have plenty of room for smart repartee, which is introduced freely. Billy Young and Ray Yearwood contribute important parts, the former playing "straight" and doubling in many characters, while Yearwood, a featured character in a great many scenes and a number of vocal offerings, revealing a pleasant tenor voice that finds a warm reception.

Bois Claire finds much to do in addition to the rather heavy duties of a prima donna, but all her work is of the highest order. This applies, too, to Sylvia Pearl and Buddy Nichols, two young ladies, without whom the show would not be the success it is.

The costumes and scenic effects present a fresh and pleasant picture.

Lou Reals has produced a really fine show in Pleasure. The offering, with the principals mentioned above, is well balanced in every way, offers absolutely nothing that is objectionable and much that is good.

Last night's applause greeted almost every scene. Apple Sauce, sung by Binder and Young, was a most amusing skit, and the Pleasure Four quartet, Binder, Young, Snyder and Yearwood, brought down the house with their "old quartet" style of rendering old favorites.
