would not have to pay so high for solid evergreen. Walks and carriage drives were then haid out, handsome shade trees and shrubbery planted, old monuments and tomb stones that had got "hove" by the frost were induced to take an upright position, and, in short, the whole cemetery was completely renovated and beautified. The streets of the village were next attacked; sidewalks were straightened and gravelled, new sidewalks constructed where required, crossings laid down, and shade trees planted along the sofevery street. Since then the improvements were continued along the roads leading to the town, and now, as we said before, owing to the operation.
