

Temperance Notes.

1. THEY never open a saloon with prayer.
2. There ought to be no room in this world for a "wine room."
3. You can never call a saloon a drug store, but you can call some drug stores saloons and hit it.
4. The saloon keeper's license to sell whisky is the devil's official commission to enlist soldiers in his army.
5. When the saloon keeper won't trust a man for a glass of beer it is high time for the groceryman to do a cash business.
6. The devil is represented as having horns, and every horn of whisky a man drinks the more like a devil he becomes.
7. A moderate drinker is worth a thousand times more to the devil for destructive purposes than an out-and-out drunkard.
8. To say, "I can drink or let it alone," is about as wise as to say, "I can drive nails in a lion's tail and get away before he can grab me." You can let it alone before you have formed the vicious habit, but afterward you may find it impossible.

Jesus, Son of God most high,
Let my sinful nature die;
Come, O come unto thine own;
Reign upon thy rightful throne.

Lord and Saviour, let us be
One in love and loyalty,
One in service, prayer, and praise,
One in thee through all our days.

TWELFTH LESSON.

Give each little child the grace
To be steadfast in his place,
Shunning sin, and serving thee
Lovingly and faithfully.

THIRTEENTH LESSON.

Lord, thy Word is, night and day,
Cloud and fire along our way,
Like a shadow from the heat,
Like a glory round our feet.
