PARNELL'S VICTORY

HOMB RULE FOR THECANDSTARE ONLY OUTCOME OF THE POLITICAL SITUA-

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The English political situation is much discussed here, where foreign politics are intelligently and closely tradied by diplomatists and others. It is thought that, whether the Tories undertake the government or whether Mr. Gladstone the government Mr. Parnell will be found to resumed the only advantage, and that a have gained the only advantage, and that a very great one for Ireland.

"The English Tories seem to me a dull set of politicians," said a diplomatist who is familiar with English politics, "and I have is familiar with English politics, "and I have pot out of all this orisis a higher idea of Mr. got out of all this orisis a higher idea of Mr. parnell's political skill than I had before. He has very adroitly played the Tories He has very adroitly played the Tories against the Liberals, and it seems to me is section to win, whatever results. Lord Salisters has shown himself unequal to his opporbury has shown himself unequal to his opporbury mas shade it would be fairer to him to say that he has not been able to con rol the say that he had rol the the rol the other Tory leaders to what he must have seen was the true policy of his party." What do you take to have been the true policy?" was asked.

"Well, what do you suppose Lord Beacons field would have done? He would have taken field would have done? He would have taken office and forced his party to agree, not only to stop coercion, but to pledge themselves to a measure of home rule in Ireland. That would have been one of those strokes in which Disraeli delighted, another step in advance for the tory democracy which he had the generalship to found and the genius to force his unwilling followers to agree to when he broadened the sullrage in 1866. See what such a stroke would have done. It would have torn apart the Liberals, for the Radical wing of Mr. Gladstone's followers have rebelled at longer coercion and have openly spoken of late the dread words Home Rule. Coercion is dead already, all the reports concur in that. If Mr. Gladstone resumes power, it is plain that he must abandon Earl Spencer's schemes and throw coercion overboard. To day's reports here even pretend that if Mr. Gladatone shall take hold again he will make Mr. Chamber lain, an openly declared Home Ruler, Chief Secretary for Ireland. That certainly will be a great triumph for Parnell. It will show, also, that while Gladstone is an undoubted bungler in foreign affairs, a wretched politician whenever he has had to cast his eyes outside of England, he is still capable of seeing the next step at home, which is more than the tories seem to see—always excepting Lord Kandolph Churchill."

"Have you a high opinion of him?" "Yes, I hoped Lord Salisbary would send him to Ireland. He has, I believe, a large future. He has pretty much sown his political wild outs, and he has what the rest of them lack—initiation and courage. He would have seen, what I shall think Gladstone begins to see if he really sends Champerlain to Ireland that to stop coercion is absolutely necessary : but that this is only the first step, and when taken must be followed by an-

"You mean home rule ?" "Of course. There is no possible middle course with Ireland between the extremist forester kind of coercion and home rule. Coercion has failed; any same man must have forescen that it would. You can't make people contented by sticking them into juil on suspicion that they are discontented. Well, put an end to coercion, and where are you. Just where you were before Forster began-not a bit further, and even not so far on toward good feeling. There is nothing for Ireland except home rule. I see that Mr. Lowell says it is not to be expected of England that she will allow Ireland to secode and become an independent nation. Mr. Lowell is a joker of jokes, and he was laughing at the man to wnom he said that. There is no question of Irish independence. The question is of what is here called local selflrish grievances; and let me tell you I have studied the Irish situation on the spot; and they have very scrious grievances over there. Ireland is governed in almost every pettiest detail from London, and of course it is mis-governed. If an attempt were made in this country to rule a State in all those details from Washington the people would not only be discontented—they would mutiny." You believe, then, home rule would quiet Ireland ?" "I do. The Irish people might not be satisfied at once; they might, perhaps, kick up their heels at the beginning, for, in spite of their sufferings, they are a frisky people, as everybody knows. But with home rule they would have the possibility of contentment. What I was saying, however, was this:—That out of all this political chaos l'arcell appears to have got for Ireland the only advantage guined by anybody; and if it could be shown that it is no accident, but that the crisis which he and the Irish party brought on was created by them because their leader foresaw the result, then I should say that both Gladstone and Salisbury had to do with a man abler than both of them for the ends he has in view, and which he has so pertinaciously pushed for now a good many years. At any rate it looks now as though he could count on the co operation of Dilke and Chamberlain and their followers, and if the Irish party have prudence enough to keep this growing radical force on their side, the next Parliamentary election, with a constituency largely recruited from the workingmen, may show some curious results."

Mr. T. C. Berchard, public school teacher, Norland, writes: "During the fall of 1881 I was much troubled with Biliousness and Dyspepsia, and part of the time was unable attend to the duties of my profession. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure was recommended to me. and I have much pleasure in stating that I was cutirely cured by using one bottle. I

RIEL INTERVIEWED.

IN SELF-DEFRNCE.

In an interview with Mr. H. Trounce, an English farmer at Saskatoon, who furnished means of transport for Riel, the latter is reportad to have given some interesting information regarding the intentions of the half-breeds at the outset of the rebellion. Riel left the impression that the agitation of the half-breeds was never anticipated to have taken such a course, and that (fabriel Dumont had gone further than and that Gabriel Dumont had gone further than was intended. At Duck Lake, according to Riel's assertion it was never intended to have shed a drop of blood. The half-breeds, Riel maintained, had struggled unsuccessfully for years for the attainment of their rights, and as a last resort determined to capture Major Crozier and the Mouated Police of Prince Allert the form additional themselves to the author. Orozier and the Mounted Police of Prince Albert before addressing themselves to the authorities at Ottawa. In conformity with this plan the half-breeds assembled at Duck Lake never anticipated firing a shot, but were confident that the hancful of police would gladly lay down their arms. Unfortunately, however, Crozier forced the fighting, and without a word of warning powed a murderous volley into the concealed foe. Smarting under the loss of a companion the enraged half-breeds returned the compliment and defeated the volunteers and police in short defeated the volunteers and police in short space. Riel, who admitted that he had partici-pated in the engagement, added that Crozier needlessly left the dead upon the field. He subsequently sent a messenger to Prince Albert assuring the authorities that the bodies could be removed without molestation on he part. The result of the first fight was that fighting was pushed upon the half-breeds, who had no other alternative than

To defense than

To defense the advocated, and the half-breeds unanimously acreed to act only in preservation of their families. When the near approach of Middle on was learned, Gabriel Dumont was sent out to reconnecter with positive instructions not to give battle. The impetuous half-breed, however, disobeyed, and with only sixty followers held several hundred volunteers and others stationed on the opposite bank of the river in anticipation of an attack from that point.

THE FROG LAKE VICTIMS.

A MONUMENT TO THEIR MEMORY BY THE 65гн.

A detachment of the 65th regiment put up a magnificent cross in memory of the dead at Frog Lake. The cross is thirty-three feet in height, and the following inscription was engraved on it:—"Erected to the Memory of the Victims of Frog Lake, by the 65th Maut Reyal Rifles, Pentecost, 24th May, 1885." The inscription was engraved about four feet from the bottom of the cross, and was cut in the wood by a knife. the cross, and was cut in the wood by a knife, then blackened with a pencil. The cross was a Pepin. Father Prevost, chaptain of the regi-ment, performed the ceremony of blessing the

THE "TIMES" GROWING SILLY. LONDON, June 23.—The Times says it thinks Salisbury's failure to obtain the desired pledges from the Liberals weakens his position. It adds, however, that the Liberals will probably not attempt to defeat the Government. The Times says Chamberlain and Mr. Chas. Dilke may discover that there are institutions in Ireland such as the poor law guardians and municipal councils administering public money largely that are only prevented from abusing their powers by the supervision of the permanent officials whom it is proposed to sweep summurily away. The Conscruatives must be prepared with an alternative policy to demolish Mr. Chamberlain's scheme.

TROUBLE WITH THE INDIANS. DEMING, N. M., June 23.-Two squaws carrying despatches from Geronino to the Mescalero tribes have quen arrested and taken to San Carlos reservation. MURDER WILL OUT.

RICHMOND, Va., June 23.—Peter Grins, colored man, has been arrested in Henry County for the murder of George Ponuill twenty years ago. The dead body of Ponnill, who was among the most prominent citizens of the county, was found in his office; by his side was a pistol, and the circumstances pointed to suicide. This theory was accepted and never contradicted until yesterday, when a daughter of Grins came to Martinsville and admitted that her father killed Ponnill and that both her and her mother were cognizant of the crime. The father sent the daughter away from home and had his son sent to the penitentiary for horse stealing. The return of the daughter after an exile of twenty years and the startling confession she makes has caused a sensation. Grins will be

THE LOSS OF THE ITALIA.

MADRID, June 24 .- The steamer Italia, the sinking of which was briefly announced yesterday, struck on Sheep Point near Lomas on Friday and sank in fifteen minutes in deep water.
