

Canadian Security Products Guide

In recent years, concern for both personal and institutional security has caused a sharp rise in the use of protective systems and devices. This guide describes Canadian products such as surveillance equipment, chemical and other detectors, alarm systems, access control devices, and personal protective apparel. These products help secure and protect military, paramilitary and commercial facilities, as well as individuals. (English, Spanish)

United States/Canada Defence Production Sharing Program: A Question and Answer Guide for U.S. Industry

Since 1959, Canada and the U.S. have pooled their efforts for common defence under the Defence Production Sharing Program (DPSP). The DPSP has allowed many Canadian firms to provide their equipment and expertise for a wide range of defence projects, involving all levels of security, as both prime and subcontractors. This guide addresses the frequently asked questions posed by American defence industry executives regarding the purchase of Canadian defence goods. (English)

HEALTH CARE

Health Care Products for World Markets

Canada's health care facilities are internationally renowned for their high standards and levels of efficiency. Contributing to this reputation is the Canadian health care industry, which supplies a