TRIED RECIPES

Cabinet Cake

Two cups sugar, three eggs, one-half cup butter. one cup milk, one teaspoonful vanilla, one level teaspoonful mace, three scant cups flour, two rounding teaspoons baking powder, salt. For a moderate cost the above is well recommended. Another egg would be better.
While intended for a plain cake, it will be found very fine with any kind of icing.

Entire Wheat Fingers. Mix one half pint of boiling milk, a saltspoonful of salt, one half cupful of chopped blanched walnuts, one tablespoonful of chopped mixed candled peels, and a piece of butter half the size of hen's egg. Stir in as much whole wheat flour is the milk will take up, and keep stirring till the mixture leaves the sides of the pan. Put the mixture on a floured bread board and roll it out a quarter of an inch Let it stand until cold, cut the dough into fingers, roll them in cracker crumbs, fry in hot butter, sift powdered sugar and cinnamon over them, and send them to the table very

SUFFRAGETTE IS AGAIN ARRESTED

Some Excitement Caused Over Apprehension of Miss Annie Keneny.

LONDON. Oct. 6.—(Can. Press.)—
Militant suffragettes today were at least temporarily deprived at the outset of their fall campaign of one of their most noted leaders. Miss Annie Kenney, who was arrested on the platform of a London music hall in the course of a meeting to inaugurate the recommencement of hostilities.

Miss Kenney was released from prison after a "hunger strike" two months ago. She was undergoing a term of eighteen months' inprisonment for conspiracy, to which she was sentenced at the London sessions on June 17.

The arrest brought about a scenof wild excitement in the crowder hall.

Miss Kenney had just opened her speech with the words. "I hear there are detectives in the wings." when a squad of policemen dashed on to the Police Were Busy.

The women seated around Miss Kenney tried to get between her and the policemen, so as to give their leader a chance of escaping, but the policemen scattered the resisting women like nine pins, and caught Miss Kanney just as she was preparing to leap from the platform into the orchestra.

As Miss Kenney was seized yells of execration arose from the hundreds of women filling the hall and there was a wild din.

This was succeeded by a short but flerce struggle between a number of women who endeavored to rescue Miss Kenney and the officers who had her in custody, but with a flying wedge kind of movement, the policemen rushed her out of the building and into a waiting taxicab.

Then after a final short and sharp skirmish, the cab started off with her on the way to Holloway jail.

What to Serve With Mutton, Veal and Pork

UTTON is not cooked so well done in English households as we have it, and is fuller of rich juices than the dish we know. Mustard dressing usually accompanies a leg of mutton and gives a zest to this meat. An excellent way to give this flavor to the roast is to spread a thin coating of made mustard over the surface of the roast. On this sprinkle sait and pepper generously, and dredge a coating of flour over all. Bake as usual and you will, I feel sure, declare it the finest flavored mutton you have ever tasted.

Roast veal is not perfect unless it is stuffed with a bread dressing. The real purpose of the stuffing is to impart a flavor of the herb seasoning to the meat and to absorb and hold the meat gravy that flows from the inside it rather dry so it can absorb the meat gravy as it cooks.

Creamed onions are well liked with veal, and as so many families have members who object to onion seasoning in the meats, this is a good way to suit all. Boil and drain small, mild white onions and dress with white

Pork must always be very well done. Twenty-five minutes to every ound is not too long, and the gravy in the pan should be freed from fat efore it is poured over the meat. There is an implement on the market called a Jack Sprat separator that removes the fat from the dripping in a moment and it saves hours of time and pounds of dripping.

Apple sauce is always served with pork in any form. Not the apple sauce made with cinnamon, nutmeg and plenty of sugar, as you make it for the table usually, but made of tart apples. Cook them without sugar and add a very small jump of butter, serve very hot. I think you will like it better so, with meats.

Spinach is also liked with all the above roasts, and is particularly appreciated with pork. Steam it as always and chop it fine, season with a appreciated with pork. Steam it as always and chop it fine, season with a little fat from the pork dripping.

Baked tomatoes stuffed with buttered crumbs appeal to every appetite and are especially nice with fried pork. Tomato sauce, too, is often asked for. This can be made at a moment's notice from canned tomatoes. Heat them and season with a little onion, cloves and some pepper. Thicken slightly with a teaspoon of flour moistened. Press thru a sieve and serve in a very small tureen while hot.

A woman is never a good cook who has not made a study of foods that combine pleasingly with one another. She should have, also, a knowledge of the methodical principles upon which this relationship of foods is based, for on this perfect cookery depends.
