CURRENT TRADE CONDITIONS. ONTARIO.

The lumber trade has been influenced by the assurance of good crops, and prices in one or two instances have further appreciated. While the better grades of pine lumber have been out of the market for some time, the same condition is now being experienced in respect to some of the lower grades. Such a situation at this season of the year, when stocks usually accumulate, is almost unprecedented and has created a very general opinion that lower prices will not be witnessed this year at least. Wholesale and retail dealers are buying for requirements and are not waiting in the expectation of obtaining better terms. It is said that preparations are being made for extensive operations in the woods this winter, but the excessive cost of labor and supplies is likely to prevent a large increase over the production of last season.

Manufacturers of flooring have advanced prices from $1 to $2 per thousand, to correspond with the higher values ruling in the United States. In Toronto retail trade is quite active, but prices on the best grades are lower accordingly than in any other market.

Among the hardwoods oak and basswood lead. Both kinds are in short supply and likely to advance in price. Shingles and lath are steady, with some manufacturers asking $1.85 for XX pine shingles at the mill.

MANITOBA AND BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Weather conditions are most favorable for harvesting operations in Manitoba and the North-west Territories, and the prediction of an abundant yield of grain is certain to be realized. This will mean much to the lumber business. The demand is gradually expanding and promises to be exceptionally large. The prosperity of the surrounding country is indicated by the volume of building operations in Winnipeg, where buildings representing a value of over $2,500,000 have been erected this year. Almost each day the announcement is made of the proposed erection of a large structure. Lumber and shingles are advancing in British Columbia, the mills being behind with orders. For Ontario delivery 6 to 2-inch cedar shingles are quoted at $2.90, and 5 to 2-inch at $3.30.

UNITED STATES.

Prospects are good for an immense demand for lumber in the United States.
