

The Tobique, the Oromocto, and the Mawaska flow into the St John. They are tributaries of the St John.

10. New Brunswick is fortunate in its noble rivers. The St John River rises in Maine and is 300 miles long. It flows into the Bay of Fundy near the city of St John. You can sail up the river from St John to Fredericton 84 miles, to Woodville 150 miles, and then to Grand Falls, 100 miles from the sea. The scenery in many places is very beautiful. The Grand Falls are 100 feet high. The Restigouche is 200 miles long, the Nepisiguit 80 miles, and the Pequaticodiac 100 miles. The Restigouche is noted for its fine scenery. Newcastle and Chatham are towns situated on the Miramichi which is a fine large river. The Kennebecasis, 100 miles long, is noted as the scene of the rowing match between the Paris and Tyne crews.
11. Forests and Lakes.—The greater part of New Brunswick is covered with forests which furnish an abundance of fine timber. In winter the lumbermen cut down the large trees and haul them to the rivers; in spring, when the ice breaks up on the rivers, they float the logs down to the sea in rafts. Then the logs are taken to sawmills and sawed up into boards and planks and shipped to other countries. There are many lakes in the forests. Grand Lake, 30 miles long,
