HOCHELAGA;
OR,
ENGLAND IN THE NEW WORLD.

CHAPTER I.

BUFFALO.—SARATOGA.

BUFFALO causes a total re-action in the mind after Niagara: bran new, bustling, changing every day—going ahead with high pressure force. It is one of the very best samples of Young Western America: full of foreigners—Irish, French, Germans; principally the latter, but all Americanized, all galvanized with the same frantic energy. The population rush about on their different occupations, railway engines scream, and steam-boats puff on every side; waggons rattle about in all
